FIREMEN AT DESERONTO

The Firemen's Convention and Demonstration at Deseronto on Tuesday and Wednesday was a highly successful affair. Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock the convention was held, delegates being in attendance from Gananoque, Napanee, Deseronto, Belleville, Trenton, Port Hope and Lindsay. Col. W. E. Rathbun, Mayor of Deseronto, on behalf of the town opened the convention with a few well chosen remarks, extending to the visiting firemen the freedom of the town and expressing the wish that an enjoyable time to one and all would result from this the annual convention and demonstration of the Eastern Ontario Volunteer Firemen's Association. In the absence of Mr. W. T. Waller, the President of the Association, Mr. Fred J. Vanalstine, Vice-President, presided. At the conclusion of the routine business the election of officers for the ensuing year took place and resulted as follows:

Hon. President—W. Waddell, of Trenton.

President—Fred J. Vanalstine, Chief of Napanee Fire Department.

Vice-President—W. Heney, Chief of Deseronto Fire Department.

Sec'y-Treas.—W. James, Trenton Fire Department.

By a unanimous vote it was decided to hold the next convention and demonstration in the town of Lindsay.

Wednesday was the big day. The town was beautifully decorated and a large crowd of people was in attendance. Shortly after one o'clock the different fire companies and their bands formed in procession on the market square and after a lengthy parade around the town wended their way to the park where a good programme of sports was pulled off. The principal event, and the one which the large crowd was mostly interested in, was the hose reel race. There were six fire companies entered for this event, and the order of their trials and the time made by each team was as follows:

Lindsay—No time given owing to trouble with coupling.

Belleville—35½ seconds.

Trenton—35½ seconds.

Napanee—37½ seconds.

Port Hope—37½ seconds.

Gananoque—35 seconds.

Gananoque won first place which carried with it a purse of $100 and the handsome Waddell trophy.

In the run off of the tie between Belleville and Trenton for second place, the time made was Belleville 35½ seconds, Trenton 33 seconds.

ORDINATION OF THE REV. J. E. Mc

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES PATRICK'S CHURCH, NAPANEE

An event unique in the history of St. Patrick's parish, Napanee, which will be long remembered by members of the large congregation who had the privilege to witness the ceremony on Saturday, July 13th, when the Rev. J. E. McNeeney was raised to the holy priesthood. Most Rev. M. J. Spratt, Archbishop of Kingston. His Grace was assisted by the Rev. A. E. Harley, St. Michael's College, Toronto, cousin of the candidate, and the Rev. C. J. L. of Belleville, with the Rev. J. I. Donald, of Kingston, as Ma Ceremonies. The Rev. Mr. McNeeney was assisted by the pastor, Rev. O'Connor, and the Rev. A. J. I. Rector of St. Mary's Cathedral station. In the sanctuary were following priests: The Rev. Fallon, Ottawa; John Kehoe, Napanee; John Quinn, Tweed; Carey, Erinville; Thos. McNeeney, J. J. Connelly, Trenton; O'Riordan, Madoc; J. J. L. Belleville; Jas Nicholson, Fraserburg; T. Hallegan and J. V. McNeeney, while letters of regret received from many others who were unable to be present owing to illness on Saturday.

The beautiful little church, renovated and redecorated, was to overflowing with both Catholic and non-Catholic friends of the levite to witness the touching ceremonies. Following the ordination mass the Rev. J. P. Fallon, D.D., the Faculty of Arts of the University of Ottawa, and brother of the Rev. M. F. Fallon, Bishop of Lennox and Addington, delivered a remarkable discourse on the priesthood.

The following morning, Sunday, a newly ordained priest sang a solemn mass, assisted by Rev. Hurley, as deacon, and the Rev. Fallon as sub-deacon. At the offertory Miss Lillian Hurley, of Petterville, sang an Ave Maria in excellent style. Following the Mass, His Grace conferred confirmation on 39 candidates, after which, being his first visit to the parish, he was privileged with an address of welcome, on behalf of the congregation, by Patrick Gleeson. His Grace received his usual paternal manner, the congregation for the reception they had accorded, congratulating them and their pastor on the successful manner in which the ceremonies of the last days had been carried out, and the healthy condition of the parish both spiritually and temporally.

MIDDLE SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

The results of the middle school examination for entrance into the Normal Schools are given below. The certificates of the successful candidates and the statements of marks of those who failed will be mailed to the Principals or Inspectors in the course of a few days.

The Department of Education in giving the results states:—

"The appeal examiners have already reread the papers of each candidate whose marks would in former years have justified an appeal. Where such a candidate has still failed, his statement of marks will be stamped as re-read and no further appeal will be allowed. In all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused, if made before September 1st, and accompanied by the fee of $2.00. In view of all precautions taken, however, it is most unlikely that such appeals would succeed.

"Successful candidates who desire to attend the coming session of the Normal Schools are notified that their applications for admission must be made to the Deputy Minister of Education not later than Tuesday, Sept. 2nd. The Normal Schools will open on Tuesday, September 23rd, at 9 a. m. at which time all candidates must present themselves. Applicants are required to be at least eighteen years of age before October 1st. Further information regarding the conditions of admission may be obtained from Sections 4 and 5 of the Syllabus, copies of which may be obtained on application of the Deputy Minister of Education. No candidate will be admitted who does not comply fully with the conditions of these Sections.

Motion Pictures of Flame Latest Thing at Canadian National Exhibition.

Moving pictures in fireworks are surely the newest thing in pyrotechnics. And the newest thing in all lines are served at the Canadian National Exhibition. Among the motion pictures framed in fire that are on the bill are a threshing machine with wheels running and grain pouring from the spout, an auto fire engine that runs so fast it crashes into an automobile, and flying machines. Add to these the changing illumination, the colored balloons, the exploding bombs, the soaring rockets, the massive golden fountains and dispersing radiating batteries, and you have a fireworks bill more varied and more wonderful than anything ever before presented at the Canadian National.

CAN'T FORGIVE MURDER

Pres. Wilson Will Never Recognize Pres. Huerta of Mexico.

Belief In Well-Informed Quarters In U. S. Capital Is that Madero Murder Will Result In Resignation of Mexican Government—Ambassador Wilson Is Also In Disgrace With Officials.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Important developments in the Mexican situation are expected shortly. At the very moment when a crisis appears to be approaching in the relations between Mexico and the United States an adjustment of conditions that may lead in the end to the establishment of peace in the republic south of the Rio Grande may be in sight. Opinion was prevalent in well informed quarters yesterday that to relieve the situation President Huerta must resign his office and permit the installation of a provisional Government which the United States would see its way clear to recognize. It is believed efforts to create a sentiment along this line are in progress.

President Wilson will not recognize the de facto Government of Mexico under present conditions as long as Huerta remains at its head. His whole attitude has shown that, and it is reported that he emphasized his determination in that particular at a conference yesterday afternoon with Henry Lane Wilson, the American ambassador to Mexico. In the President's opinion, it was said, the assassination of President Madero brings a moral element into the situation that operates against Huerta's recognition.

The ambassador wants Huerta recognized on certain conditions, which he laid before President Wilson in a prepared statement yesterday.

It provided for a recognition of Huerta and the enforcement to the letter of the neutrality laws, making it impossible for the rebels and federal troops, but particularly the rebels, to obtain any arms and ammunition in the United States.

The plans provided for the co-operation of the army and navy, the navy to blockade both coasts of Mexico and the army to chain guard the border between the United States and Mexico. President Wilson has not been impressed with the report Ambassador Wilson made, and it does not correspond, except in few instances, with the reports the President had received from William Bayard Hale, the magazine writer, whom the President sent to Mexico to make a special investigation, and the report submitted to Secretary of State Bryan by Reginaldo H. Del Valle, the Californian, sent to Mexico by Mr. Bryan.

There was one feature of Ambassador Wilson's report which stood out and compared favorably with the reports made by Mr. Hale and Mr. Del Valle. It was said that Huerta's strength in Mexico is greater than has been supposed here in Washington. It became known late yesterday afternoon that there was some doubt about Ambassador Wilson returning to Mexico.

Last night it was learned on high authority that he would not return.

President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan are incensed at the conduct of Mr. Wilson since his arrival in the United States. "He has talked too much" is the view taken by many officials of the administration.

There is the belief that much of the ## MISSION A FAILURE.

Carson's Anti-Home Rule Tour Proved Discouraging.

LONDON, July 29.—All efforts of the Lords and the Tory party generally to drive the Government to dissolve Parliament have failed, as is well understood among the Ministerialists, who now think there will be no dissolution until 1915 unless something unforeseen occurs.

Following the second rejection of the home rule for Ireland bill by the House of Lords, Sir Edward Carson is again stumping Ulster, but Orange enthusiasm for civil war is rapidly growing down. Carson, according to his friends, is utterly sickened by the situation and especially by the apathy with which England has received his Orange campaign. He knows now that the worst that can happen is some rioting in Belfast and two or three other places, which can be suppressed by the police. His only hope is that the military may mutiny, but this idea is repudiated indignantly by the soldiers themselves.

Sir West Ridgeway, formerly Under Secretary of Ireland, afterward Governor of Ceylon, laughs at the notion that the Government will have to call out the soldiers to shoot down Orangemen if they rebel.

"The Government in such an unhappy contingency," says Sir West, "need not fire a shot or send a single soldier into Northeast Ulster. If Northeast Ulster were to revolt the Government could blockade the port of Belfast, cut off railway communication with the greater part of Ireland and leave the rebellious section to stew in its own juice. In such an unhappy state of things a provisional government would be even in a worse plight than Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria is at present."

OFFERS BOND FOR MOIR.

Says London Soldier Would Be Good Citizen If Freed.

LONDON, Ont., July 29.—Application has been made to Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, for the release from the Central Prison, Toronto, of Private William A. Moir, who is serving a life sentence there for the murder at Wolseley Barracks on the night of Good Friday, April 17, 1908, of Col.-Sergt. Lloyd. Mr. Lawrence, although not personally acquainted with Moir, had been informed that the man is now in a normal state of mind, and that he is filled with the resolve to be of good behavior in the future. In view of this fact Mr. Lawrence offers to enter into a bond for $5,000 for the conduct of Moir during the remainder of his lifetime if he is released.

Moir returned to the barracks here on the night mentioned and when reprimanded for being under the influence of liquor shot and killed Lloyd. Moir escaped in the darkness and eluded a posse of local detectives that pursued him for several days. He was arrested some weeks afterwards at Arthur, Ont., and the defence that he committed the act during a temporary fit of insanity brought on by epilepsy saved him from the gallows. He was sent to the Hamilton Hospital for the Insane, and after several attempts made his escape from that institution. When recaptured he was transferred to the Central Prison, where he has since been confined.

The man eating fish par excellence is the great white shark. It is otherwise known by the name of man eater. Occasionally specimens are seen on both coasts of the United States, though its more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unsafe to about Ambassador Wilson returning to Mexico.

Last night it was learned on high authority that he would not return.

President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan are incensed at the conduct of Mr. Wilson since his arrival in the United States. "He has talked too much" is the view taken by many officials of the administration.

Worse is the belief that much of the talking done by the ambassador was for the purpose of embarrassing the administration, or, in the event he was not sent back, he would have a fair excuse to make an outcry and possibly have a club which he could use politically.

The interviews he gave out have resulted in all administration officials regarding him with more or less suspicion. Almost every member of the administration believes Ambassador Wilson has used his official position to aid the cause of Huerta.

It is because of this atmosphere around Ambassador Wilson that his proposal for solving the troubles in Mexico is not regarded highly by administration officials, and which, for the same reason, will receive little or no consideration at the hands of the administration.

First Naval Battle.

POINT ISABEL, Texas, July 29.—A Mexican federal gunboat was reported to have fired on Constitutionalists at the mouth of the Rio Grande yesterday morning. Constitutionalists hold Matamoras, 20 miles up the river opposite Brownville, Texas. This was the first reported naval activity in the Rio Grande in any of the recent Mexican revolutions.

Residents Will Not Heap Humiliation Upon Detroit.

WINDSOR, July 29.—Plans have been practically abandoned to hold a counter demonstration here on Aug. 16 next to celebrate the capture of Fort Detroit in the War of 1812.

The Essex Historical Society has forwarded to Sir Edmund Walker, member of the Peace Commission, a formal protest against a series of Perry celebrations along the great lakes in the States of Ohio and Michigan, more especially since these celebrations have been featured by jingoistic utterances.

WHERE IS THE CREW?

Yacht With All Sails Set Found Without Anybody Aboard.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 29.—The "Ripple," a twenty-foot sloop rigged racing yacht was picked up in Lake Erie, sixteen miles northeast of Cleveland, early yesterday morning by fishermen. All the sails were set, there was no one on board the boat. The craft is not known here. All ropes were neatly coiled, so the "Ripple" could not have broken loose from moorings. Her main sheet was made fast in a manner which necessitated sailing close to the wind. An old grey sweater, a water-soaked package of provisions, and two empty bottles were all that was aboard. The sole clew as to where the yacht came from was a small brass plate bearing the name of the craft builders, the Weir Boat Co., Hamilton, Ontario.

On the peak of the mainsail was painted the number 12 in large red numerals. This led to the belief that the Ripple was one of the racing yachts in the Put-In-Bay regatta, but no boats are reported missing from there. The number, too, was an old one. The wind for the past two days has been from the south. Fishermen believe the yacht came from Erie or possibly Buffalo.

ELEVEN SONS DEAD.

Drowning at Lindsay Carries Off Last of Joseph York's Family.

LINDSAY, July 29.—A sad drowning accident occurred yesterday afternoon, when Joseph, the seven-year-old son of Joseph York, a laborer, met death in the Scugog River.

It appears the father lived alone with the son, ten other boys being dead and Mrs. York missing. The young lad was in the habit of accompanying his father to and from work, amusing himself as best he could while his father was unloading cars of lumber. The first evidence that the boy was missing was when his hat was seen floating on the river. Apparently the young lad slipped off a boat-house wharf and disappeared without a scream. His body was recovered, but life was extinct. The father is heart-broken over the loss of what he claimed to be his only friend, the two having been very much attached to each other.

The railway men are very indignant and something, they say, is going to happen in a few days.

more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unsafe to do this, however, when the head has been freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything is placed between them.

Legend of the Moss Rose.

A German tradition gives the origin of the moss rose as follows: An angel came to earth in mortal guise. He sought a place of shelter and repose after his labors of love, but every door was shut against the heavenly visitor. At length the angel, being very weary, sank upon the ground and over him a rosebush spread like a tent. It caught upon its outspread leaves the falling dew which would otherwise have drenched the messenger of love. Waking, the angel said to the rose:

Thou hast yielded the shelter that man denied;

A proof of my love shall with thee abide. And the green moss gathered about the stem

WHAT WILL HE DO NOW?
MR. BORDEN IS SLEEPLESS HUNTING
A NEW EMERGENCY.

For a year for more now Premier Borden has been dreaming of an emergency which may overwhelm the British Empire in fury and disaster. For the same period of time he has been trying to sit between the two stools of Nationalism and Imperialism. He was furtively watching the lightning playing around the horizon and listening to the booming of the distant thunder, while at the same time he was carefully watching his Nationalist allies and listening to the boom of the growing tide of resentment against his naval acrobatics.

In despair he finally fled to the Atlantic coast to seek peace. Even there the naval ghost would not down, and he is reported to be in close cable communications with the British admiralty hoping to find some way by which he can get out of his self imposed dilemma without following the common sense course proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Then came "the most unkindest cut of all." Winston Churchill cut the ground from under Mr. Borden's feet and left him derelict indeed, when he declared in the British parliament on July 17th, that he knew of nothing in the international situation necessitating an increase in the British Naval programme. And this, after Mr. Borden had intimated that the despairing British public were hurrying to get together three extra Dreadnoughts to take the place of those he had proposed. It is small wonder that Mr. Borden is reported suffering from sleeplessness and the desire to put off meeting parliament until next year. There will be much to explain when he does face the representatives of the people. All this will be as nothing to the necessity of formulating some permanent policy which will not be a policy of permanent tribute, and yet hold his Nationalist allies.

EMPIRE SEEMS SAFE FOR A TIME.

The British Navy will be increased by a new destroyer every two weeks for the next nine months; by a light cruiser every thirty days for the next year, and by a super-dreadnaught every forty-five days for the next eighteen months. It is also worthy of note that every one of these ships will be fully manned and officered and ready to meet any possible foe the day they are put into commission. With such speedy preparation for every eventuality, it is not likely that the British people are living awake nights worrying because they have not got Mr. Borden's three empty dreadnaughts.

A SHAMEFUL COMPARISON.

WHAT AUSTRALIA HAS DONE AND MR. BORDEN PREVENTED.

While Mr. Borden has been plunging Canada into bitter partisan strife in a struggle to secure political advantage for himself out of the Naval situation, the Australian people have been going steadily ahead carrying out their part of the agreement made with Canada in 1909. Already the Commonwealth has a powerful fleet unit, with the dreadnaught cruiser, "Australia," the light cruisers, "Sydney" and "Melbourne," three ocean going destroyers well under #### Seven Were Caught In Far North? Indians and Sold for $1,570.

Seven little black fox whelps, with an option over their heads of $12,000, and with another offer for their purchase of $30,000, made since the option was filed, were brought into Edmonton the other day and the owner, S. A. Bentley, is watching them like so many nuggets of gold.

These little aristocrats of the fur-bearing tribe, were purchased by Mr. Bentley from a half-breed, who took them from their den at the head of the Loon river which is located north of the Wabshaw lakes and some 330 miles by way of the summer trail northwest of Edmonton.

An old-timer of the north, and a man speaking fluently almost every Indian language and especially the Cree, Mr. Bentley is naturally very much acquainted with the Indians of the north, and it was while trading with them that the information that a half-breed had found the den, and that the seven baby foxes were in his possession became known. The time was not long before Mr. Bentley located the man, who, when offered $1,500 for the little tribe, gladly accepted the sum without further parley.

The litter now takes the form of a party of expensive guests. Expensive indeed to the owner, for the little aristocrats are far from being like the ordinary fox; they must be fed on young spring chickens, costing in the neighborhood of a dollar apiece; no cast-off meat or trimmings are by any means good enough for them.

They are said to be about 60 days old, and each carries a hide approximately one and a half square feet in size, being worth $1,715. That is at the rate of $12,000 for which the option was taken, but since then a sum of no less than $30,000 has been offered by a Prince Edward Island breeder for the little tribe. This offer was made about twenty-four hours after the option had been filed.

The trip down from the north was one, the like of which Mr. Bentley had never experienced before. The foxes in a crate, the food upon which they were to be fed, besides all the other necessary articles of a north country pack he carried upon his back, traveling for the greater part over muskeg country. The little animals had at all times to be fed on fresh game, and this, no matter how difficult, had to be procured.

It can be well imagined that it was with relief Mr. Bentley arrived in Edmonton.

surface is rough. It looks like the landscape in the Alps or Yellowstone park or any other rough section of the earth. It has peaks, ranges, ridges, valleys, plains and holes, gulches and all sorts of uneven places, and if the earth could be made as small as a baseball it would be practically a perfect sphere and absolutely smooth. This is because the highest mountains of the earth and the deepest valleys would be millions upon millions of times smaller in comparison with the rough uneven places on a baseball if either the earth were reduced to the size of a baseball or a baseball enlarged to the size of the earth.

If this were not true the earth would not revolve so regularly upon its axis. It would perform an "in shoot" or "out shoot" and curve off through space.

Even the billiard ball has a surface much rougher in comparison to its size than the surface of the earth, and we refer to a billiard ball as about the smoothest thing known. "As smooth as a billiard ball" is a well known simile. For the same reason that a perfectly smooth baseball could not be curved, a perfectly smooth and perfectly round billiard ball could not be made to curve on the table. It would not take "English," as billiard players call it when they make a ball go forward and then roll backward or in any direction just by the manner in which they strike it with a chalked cue.

This fact of roughness causing it to spin becomes all too evident when a player forgets to chalk his cue and plays several shots thereafter. If the leather tip of the cue becomes shiny it will slip on the ball. There is no purchase with which it can take hold. But chalk is sticky stuff, and the granules are large, so that a well chalked cue has a very rough surface, and this rough surface of the tip of the cue fits into the rough projections on the ball, and thereby a ball can be given a lot of twist. In order to accomplish this successfully, moreover, the billiard cloth nap must be new and therefore rough.

During recent experimentation with regard to the kinetic theory of gases a Belgian scientist desired to find out how perfect a sphere could be made in order that by the clashing of these together an idea might be secured of the effect of the collisions of the spherical atoms that make up a gas. The project had to be abandoned at last because no machinery could be constructed that would turn out a perfect sphere artificially, and nature has no perfect sphere of large size in all her many forms of matter. Perfect disks could be made, but a round ball was beyond the limits of human accomplishment.—New York American.

Later and more accurate surveys showed that point was about 25 north of the 49th parallel, and this place the boundary makes above that line.

Wickes is not prepared to commit this entirely, although admitting British merchant houses have the it worth while starting offices in Canadian centres while the American manufacturer is on the spot. The lost to the United Kingdom had almost entirely absorbed by the ed States.

New Immigration Plan.

The business of attracting immigrants to Canada has heretofore been a combination propaganda of the Government and the railways. A new arrangement is about to be effected whereby the railways will fine their efforts to the tourist to the more profitable end of the business, and the Government will attend to immigration propaganda.

It will augment its work, however, to include, not only homeseekers, factory men and mechanics. Therefore the railways have particularly looked after this latter class.

The railways by extensive advertising and otherwise will now concern their efforts in inducing high European and American tourist to

WOLFE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Canon F. G. Scott Wants One Over- looking Plains of Abraham.

The well-known Canadian writer, Canon Frederick George Scott, of Quebec, has interested himself in the erection of a Memorial Church to Gen. Wolfe on a site overlooking the Plains of Abraham, the purchase of which he has already arranged on reasonable terms, if the necessary funds are forthcoming. Canon Scott's appeal is in part as follows:

"Next year we are to celebrate the Peace Centenary. One has been thinking of the best way in which we could mark that event in Quebec, for Quebec must not be left out in this celebration. There is something which churchmen might do which would mark the event in a unique way. James Wolfe was a churchman, and a man of sincere and devout habits. In an age of license, he lived a pure life, and the victory he won was a victory of character.

"On the Avenue des Braves, that magnificent new avenue built by the Battlefields Commission to connect the Plains of Abraham with the battlefield of St. Foye, is a slight rise in the ground. From this eminence, which marks the very spot where Wolfe breathed his last. In another direction, one can see the monument

A BIRTHDAY REVIEW.

Canada Has Just Doubled Population In 46 Years.

The Dominion of Canada was 46 years old on Tuesday, July 1. In 1837 it consisted of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Its population was approximately 3,400,000. To-day it embraces the whole of the mainland of British North America and Prince Edward Island, and its population is 7,204,892—an increase of over 100 per cent. in a little over forty years. The Sisterhood of Provinces has been increased, since 1867, by the creation of Manitoba, the admission of British Columbia and Prince Edward Island, and the creation of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The Dominion now consists of nine provinces and several territories, its actual area being 3,729,665 square miles.

When it came into being, its population was made up chiefly of French and English-speaking people; several tribes of Indians and a few small settlements of half-breeds. To-day it is a cosmopolitan household and its population is representative of every nation under the sun. In recent years hundreds of thousands of foreigners—men and women of every race and clime and tongue—have been brought to Canadian shores by a tide of immigration that apparently is yet far from its flood. Happy and contented these one-time aliens now are in their new homes in the "Land of the Maple." They have put their shoulders to the task of nation-building and they are courageously and perseveringly working for the development of their adopted country. Much of Canada's future greatness will no doubt be directly traceable to their earnest, patient efforts.

This year the tide of immigration moving towards Canadian shores is higher than ever. Thousands have already entered the Dominion, thousands are now on the high seas, and thousands more will set sail for Canadian ports before the summer is over. Last year a high-water mark in the matter of immigration was reached, but all records are expected to be broken this season. It is estimated that nearly 400,000 will enter the Dominion during the fiscal year 1913-14.

For the fiscal year 1911-12, March 31 to April 1, the year for which figures are obtainable, there arrived in Canada from foreign countries overseas 82,406 immigrants; from Great Britain 133,121; and from the United States, 133,710—a total of 354,237.

Of the overseas immigrants 95,107 were English, 1,699 were Welsh, 32,988 were Scotch, and 1,450 were Irish. Eighty-six came from South Africa, 266 from Australia, 4,871 from Austria, 143 from Bohemia, 228 from Bukowina, 288 from Croatia, 33 from Dalmatia, 1,594 from Galicia, 482 from Hungary, 13,346 from Rutenia, 1,601 from Belgium, 3,295 from Bulgaria, 6,247 from China, 1,077 from Holland, 2,094 from France, 4,666 from Germany, 314 from the West Indies, 9 from Bermuda, 70 from Jamaica, 7,590 from Italy, 765 from Japan, 2,598 from Newfoundland, 61 from New Zealand, 6 from Portugal, 5,060 from Poland, 19 from Persia, 793 from Roumania, 9,805 from Russia, 1,646 from Finland, 191 from Serbia, 628 from Denmark, 295 from Iceland, 2,394 from Sweden, 1,692 from Norway, 632 from Turkey, 60 from Armenia, 144 from Syria, 2 from Arabia, 3 from Hindustan, and 3 from Mexico. In addition to these, 5,322 Hebrews, 24 Doukhobors, and 138 negroes entered the Dominion. From Continental centres 82,406 immigrants were received, an increase of 15,786 over the total of the previous year; from the United States 133,710, an increase of 12,269.

FISHERMEN'S SUPERSTITIONS.

Japanese Women Silent While Husbands Are Fishing.

In British Columbia the Indians ceremoniously went to meet the first salmon and in flattering voices tried to win their favor by calling them all chiefs.

Every spring the Karaks used to dance for salmon. Meanwhile one of their number secluded himself in the mountains and fasted for 10 days. Upon his return he solemnly approached the river, took the first salmon of the catch, ate some of it, and with the remainder lighted a sacrificial fire. The same Indians laboriously climbed the mountain top after the poles for the spearing booth, being convinced that if they were gathered where salmon were watching no fish would be caught.

In Japan among the primitive races of the Ainos even the women left at home are not allowed to talk lest the fish may hear and disappear, while the first fish is always brought in through a window instead of a door, so the other fish may not see.

The Eskimo women of Alaska never sew while the men are fishing and should any mending be imperative they do it shut up in little tents out of sight of the sea.

Canada is not prepared to confirm entirely, although admitting few merchant houses have thought of while starting offices in large Canadian centres while the American factor is on the spot. The trade of the United Kingdom had been entirely absorbed by the United States.

The situation is superb, and, as I saw the sunset from it last evening the grandeur of the hope, which has long been mine, of seeing on that spot an architecturally exquisite church—a true angel of peace—rise to the memory of the great hero whose deathbed that green plain was, possessed me, and I thanked God for the privilege which was ours, if we chose to use it, of coupling the honor of the hero with the honor and worship of the Lord whom he faithfully served. The idea is one which appeals to all those who in their minds know that the truest knight-hood is founded in religion."

A Blind Man's Memory.

The Newmarket, Ont., Industrial Home has a phenomenon. Aged Robert Waterson, an inmate of that institution, is blind, but despite the defect of his sight he can recognize almost any man to whom he has spoken before, as soon as he hears him speak. His remarkable characteristic lies in a wonderfully developed sense of sound.

Recently when the York County Council visited the Home the members agreed, before they arrived, to test "Old Bob's" ability to detect the identity by the voice. Reaching the home they found the old man engaged in one of the buildings and one after the other, twenty-three of the members and men with them approached him and addressed him with "Well, Bob, how are you to-day?" or similar greetings.

Out of twenty-three he failed to recognize only one man. When his memory failed or faltered he asked the speaker to grasp his hand and with the assistance of the occurrence, communication of the hand he would be able to repeat the man's name almost instantly.

Councillor S. R. Goodwin, of Holland Landing, was a new member of the council last year and had only met "Old Bob" on one occasion. When he stepped up in the line and spoke to the blind man, he was greeted with "How do you do? Mr. Goodwin."

Another instance of his astonishing memory was given when Mr. Seneca Baker, councillor for Whitechurch, who was in the council in 1907, and had retired from it then until this year, when he again became a member of it, addressed the old inmate.

"Why, if this ain't Mr. Baker back again," he said, and expressed his delight at hearing him again.

Of the 354,237 immigrants, 211,266 were men, 82,922 were women, and 60,049 were children. 76,512 of the males were general laborers, 19,986 were mechanics, 11,892 were clerks, 4,850 were miners, and 11,879 were not classified. Of the women 10,774 belonged to the farm laboring class, 5,678 to the class of general laborers, and 7,713 to the mechanics' class.

Scriptures In Parliament.

Parliamentarians are not always adept at quoting Scripture. For instance, Hon. W. T. White, in criticizing the Liberal naval policy, described it as being "like the image seen in his dream by Belshazzar, principally brass, but with feet of clay."

"Belshazzar or Nebuchadnezzar?" queried Mr. Archie McCoig, of West Kent, who, by the way, is a good Presbyterian.

But the Minister of Finance heard or heeded not. He continued to tell the House about Belshazzar and his dream.

One of Mr. White's colleagues, Hon. Robert Rogers, missed a Bible quotation at the next sitting. "My honorable friends opposite," said Mr. Rogers, "should remember the scriptural injunction: 'When I became a man I put away the things of a child.'"

Equally amusing was the counsel of Mr. W. F. Carroll, who urged his political opponents to take note of the Biblical words: "To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

"What part of the Bible?" enquired Colonel Hugh Clark, another Presbyterian.

Mr. Carroll was not abashed. "Some honorable members of this House," he retorted, "seem to have never read their Bible, and I am afraid never will."—Canadian Courier.

None For Canada.

An Imperial Motor Transport Conference is to be held soon in London under the auspices of the Royal London Automobile Club. One topic of discussion is the problem of military transport in time of need. Hon. Colonel Sam Hughes' reply to a question on this matter was to the effect that the Canadian Department of Militia could not ask the manufacturers for a special type of military transport. In time of need a conscription of commercial vehicles would provide a suitable form of transport adapted to the roads and bridges of the country.

of the Amos even the women left at home are not allowed to talk lest the fish may hear and disappear, while the first fish is always brought in through a window instead of a door, so the other fish may not see.

The Eskimo women of Alaska never sew while the men are fishing and should any mending be imperative they do it shut up in little tents out of sight of the sea.

Under no circumstances on the northeast coast of Scotland will a fisherman at sea mention certain objects on land, such as "minister," "kirk," "swine," etc., and the line will surely be lost if a pig is seen while baiting it. As on the land chickens must not be counted until they are hatched, so at sea fish must not be counted until they are all caught. It is good luck to find mice nibbling among the nets; a horseshoe nailed to the mast will help, and a herring caught and salted down will produce wonders.

In the Shetland Islands a cat must not be mentioned before a man baiting his line, and among the Magyars of Hungary a fisherman will turn back and wait over a tide if he meets a woman wearing a white apron.

Every year the natives of the Duke of York Island decorate a canoe with flowers and ferns, fill it with shell money and cast it adrift "to compensate the fish for their fellows caught and eaten."

It was always the custom of the Maoris, the primitive inhabitants of New Zealand, to put the first fish that they caught back into the sea "with a prayer that it might tempt other fish to come and be caught."

If the fish did not come soon enough in British Columbia the Indians used to employ a wizard, who made an image of a swimming fish and put it in the water to attract live fish to the bait.

A Card Dealing Machine.

A Parisian gambler has just patented a machine for dealing cards. He claims for it the advantage of preventing the cards from being soiled by the fingers and also of making impossible any misdeal or any sharp practice by the dealer. The cards, having been shuffled, are placed in the box which is held in the dealer's left hand. With his right he pulls a wire which sets in motion a wheel that pushes forth the top card. It is evident that none but the top card can possibly be dealt, but old professional gamblers smile at the device, recognizing that it in no way prevents their "ringing in a cold deck." If he wants to put an effectual stop to swindling the inventor will have to devise a machine that will also shuffle and cut the cards before dealing them and so simple that no one can fix it to do "crooked business."

An Automatic Cut-off.

One of the most ingenious of recent inventions is a simple device to prevent steamship propellers from "racing" when there is a heavy sea running. If the waves run high and the ship tosses the propellers often are entirely out of water when the ship's nose is down, and consequently the engines race wildly. The old remedy for this condition was to have an engineer turn off the steam just as the propellers were rising out of the water, and turn the steam on again as the propellers returned to the sea. The new invention consists of a little tube partially filled with mercury that flows back and forth with the tossing of the ship. This tube can be so adjusted that it will turn the steam off just as the vessel kicks her propellers in the air, and turn it on again when they are due to strike the water.

ONTARIO POLITICS

Why are licenses to be issued in Meaford for another year? This promises to be a very interesting question for Hon. Mr. Hanna and the License Branch of the Provincial Secretary's Department, had issued their orders that licenses in that town should not be renewed after May first. The local commissioners under their powers granted an extension of three months up to August first but it was taken for granted as far as public announcements are concerned, that at the latter date the licenses would not be renewed.

At the local option vote last January the temperance people were defeated by a fraction of a vote less than the required three-fifths. A suit and counter suit were entered into and moreover a large deputation not only from Meaford but from the surrounding country waited upon the Provincial Secretary and requested that the licenses be not renewed in view of the fact that the selling of liquor in Meaford was doing away to a considerable extent with the good results of local option in Owen Sound and the absence of licenses from all the rest of North Grey. It was in answer to this deputation that the Department decided not to renew the licenses.

Now the announcement is made that the licenses are to be renewed by the Department after all. Reports as to the exact events which preceded this decision and to a reported agreement made by the temperance representatives are still rather meager and nothing definite can be said yet as to the justice or injustice of the granting of these licenses.

A few undoubted facts, however, lend significance to the whole case and are worthy of note. During the recent bye-election in the Constituency of North Grey, of which Meaford is a part, the Conservatives made much party capital out of the action of Mr. Hanna in refusing to renew the Meaford licenses although local option in that town had been defeated technically. In the Government press and on the Government platform this action was loudly praised as being a definite proof of the Whitney Government's good will to temperance and of its generosity to temperance voters.

At this very same time, however, it was being whispered about the town that if the Government candidate were elected the licenses would be renewed. This underground rumor secured for the Government the support of the liquor men and of those favorable to the liquor interests. True, as it gradually became known about town it alienated the temperance vote in Meaford with the result that the Liberal candidate got a majority of 20 in that town. In view of the decision of the Department to renew the licenses this question becomes important. Had the whispered rumor a basis in fact after all, and also, why did the Government try to ride two horses in the bye-election?

North Grey still continues a live topic in Provincial politics. Its importance is rather over-estimated and the Liberal defeat cannot be dismissed by any such phrases as "Abolish the Bar Policy Condemned" or "Hanna Vindicated."

In the first place a bye-election is very different from a general election. On the whole the issues are very much more local and there is not that feeling of co-operation among the voters in the different ridings. Take the temperance issue, for example. All of North Grey, except Meaford, which went Liberal, is without licenses. If the recent contest had been part of a general election the temperance forces would have worked more vigorously

GROTESQUE HEADDRESSES.

Mongolian Women Drench Their Hair With Fish Glue and Grease.

The headdress of the Mongolian women is a very complicated affair. When the hair is made up in the shape of elephants' ears it indicates matrimony, and when worn in a tail it means that the woman is a spinster. In order to give this shape to the hair the woman makes a parting in the middle of her head, then drenches the hair, each side by turn, with a pleasing mixture of fish glue and grease.

When it is thoroughly soaked she spreads the upper part out thinly in such a way that at its broadest it measures about six inches wide. To keep the hair in this shape she employs wooden clips, which, when the hair is dry, are replaced, if she can afford it, by silver or golden ones. The lower part of the hair is made into a plait, with a silver or golden ornament at the end to prevent its coming undone.

These silver or golden clips and hair ornaments are often set with precious stones, and princesses even have the whole of the plait hidden by means of silver or golden rings. As the making up of the hair takes a whole day and the Mongol women are very lazy and not particularly cleanly in their habits, it is not surprising to learn that this operation is performed by some once a week, by others once a month and yet others—pretty low down in the social scale—once a year.—Wide World Magazine.

CASTORIA

In the first place a bye-election is very different from a general election. On the whole the issues are very much more local and there is not that feeling of co-operation among the voters in the different ridings. Take the temperance issue, for example. All of North Grey, except Meaford, which went Liberal, is without licenses. If the recent contest had been part of a general election the temperance forces would have worked more vigorously because they would have known that the election of a Liberal would help to secure the abolition of the bar in other constituencies. In a bye-election, however, there is not the same incentive.

Nor did the Hanna charges have much effect on the result. They probably did lead strong party men among the Conservatives to stand in solidly with their party, but the result is by no means a vindication of the Provincial Secretary.

Local issues on the other hand undoubtedly did have an effect. C. S. Cameron, the Conservative candidate and his supporters, even in the presence of Cabinet Ministers went up and down the Riding promising that if the Government candidate were elected, a normal school would be established in Owen Sound and financial aid given to the building of a railway between Meaford and Owen Sound. Both these things are badly needed in the Riding. The Government candidate had no right to adopt such campaign tactics but he did so and the result was to be expected. The promising of favors, if the vote were closely analyzed would be shown to be one of the chief factors in the election.

Liberal leaders are not discouraged and the great rank and file of the Liberal party also realizes that in a bye-election the odds are strongly in favor of the Government and that the reverse in North Grey is only temporary. They are confident that the general elections will tell a different story.

AVERAGE YIELDS.

A common question round the factory receiving platform is "how are the cows doing". What a volume of thought that suggests! If they are doing well is it because of good feed and careful attention; or may it be despite the feed and care they deserve, but do not get? Leaving aside the question of weather, breed, heredity and persistency of flow of milk, is it possible to account for the remarkable differences in yield that are to be found? For instance, the dairy division at Ottawa found in one locality 100 cows that gave 3,000 lbs. of fat last month, but 100 cows close by in the same county gave only 2,500 lbs. of fat. Another lot of cows in a near by county gave only 2,200 lbs.

Is the ordinary factory patron's herd keyed up to the pitch of creditable performance, or is it just joggling along in the old rut of "average" yields? Suppose the patron ascertains his herd is doing "about as well" as his neighbour's does it not seem a great pity that his ambition should end there?

Average cows do vastly better if their owners train them and train themselves for better results. If each lot of 100 cows in the Dominion gave an additional 500 pounds of fat per month would that not make a startling difference in the amount of the patron's cheques? Cow testing has helped many communities to far larger banking business, because it shows that scores of cows and average herds, can be made to produce far more than they do at present. Make each cow pay a good profit.

In winter, passing from one feeding ground another, they travel in single through the snow, making a trail on which the snow is packed hard as a rock. When they are a grass-grown slaughter meadow stay there until all the feed is exhausted and the whole area is completely trampled down. Unlike the wild horses, which paw away the with their front feet, the buffalo its high heels as a shovel and so the snow in clouds in order to the grass beneath. Several pictures of the woodlands were obtained. The Indian Pierre Squirrel, who accompanied party and who is most familiar that region, estimated the number the buffalo there to be at least hundred. # CHILDREN WITH DEFECTIVE SIGHT.

A letter received by Mr. Gardiner, Principal of the Ontario School for the Blind, from the Superintendent of the American Mission School for the blind at Bombay, India, mentions that the estimated number of blind people in India is 500,000, of whom certainly not more than 500 have had any opportunity for any education or training along industrial lines. Reports from many places in the United States, as well as from several European countries, indicate that blindness is decreasing in the most highly civilized communities, largely as the result of greater knowledge, and more attention to preventive measures, on the part of physicians and nurses. While the return of the last Dominion census on this subject have not yet been tabulated and published, there is reason to believe that a similar statement is applicable to Canada. Nevertheless, it is probable that there are now—as there always have been—many young people in Ontario who ought to be enrolled as pupils in the school at Brantford, but are not. Some parents of blind children have never heard of the School; others are sensitive about letting it be known that their children are afflicted; many from what might be described as excessive affection, do not like to separate from their children, even for the children's good. To get into communication with the parents of these for whose benefit the School is maintained, the Principal depends largely upon the kind intervention of neighbours, teachers, ministers and municipal officers and he will be glad to get from any reader of the Express, the name and postoffice address of any person under 21 years of age, who is blind, or whose sight is so defective that attendance at the local Public School is not practicable. By the methods in use at Brantford, a good English education can be acquired by the sightless, and instruction is also given in such trades as are available to enable the blind to become self-supporting. There is no charge for board, tuition or books. Address H. F. Gardiner, Principal O. S. B., Brantford, Ontario.

MUSCLES OF STEEL.

They May Go Hand in Hand With Poor Physical Health.

Great muscular strength is no criterion of health. The most powerful athlete may be conquered by malaria or typhoid fever when a frail little woman throws off the attacks of the germs that cause these diseases and never feels them.

A great prizefighter walks out in the evening and is stung by a mosquito. A day or two later he is shivering with cold and burning with fever by turns. The mosquito has injected the germs of malaria into his blood, and his blood has not the strength to exterminate them. He receives a small wound. The surgeon has to sew it up, and the big, husky chap faints from the pain, while a slender, fragile woman endures pains a hundred times as severe with scarcely a murmur.

For muscular strength and physical health have nothing to do with each other. The physical exercise that causes the former is, however, conducive to the latter, for it makes a man breathe deeply, sets heart pumping more vigorously, aids his stomach and intestines to digest better, distracts the mind from care and promotes sound sleep. But great muscular strength often exists with poor power of resistance to disease.

The Liverpool market closed  $\frac{1}{4}$ d to  $\frac{1}{2}$ d lower on wheat, and  $\frac{1}{4}$ d to  $\frac{1}{2}$ d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed  $\frac{1}{4}$ c lower. Antwerp  $\frac{1}{8}$ c higher, and Budapest 1c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, July 28.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, receipts for the week ended July 26 were 1600 cattle, 2100 sheep and lambs, 1650 hogs and 650 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1150 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 350 calves.

The weaker feeling which came to the surface of the market for cattle last week was the principal feature of the trade again today, and prices showed a further decline of 25c per 100 pounds. Increased offerings and the warm weather are held responsible for this reduction. Sales of full loads of choice steers, averaging 1200 pounds each, were made at $6.75; good at $6 to $6.25, and medium to fair at $4.75 to $5.25 per 100 pounds. Canners' cows sold at from $2.75 to $3.25, and bulls at $3.50 to $4 per 100 pounds.

A much stronger feeling developed in the market for sheep and lambs, and prices for the former advanced 50c, and for the latter 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the fact that a leading

The Storm on Galilee's Sea Furnishes Text for a Discourse—Acts as Well as Words of Jesus Parabolic—The Storm as a Type—The Master and His Disciples as Types—Quelling the Storm a Type.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Aboard "The Empress of Ireland" on the Atlantic, July 27. — "There arose a great tempest in the sea . . . but He was asleep. And His disciples awoke Him, saying, Lord, save us; we perish. . . . Then He arose and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm." — Matthew 8:24-26.

The Bible informs us that Jesus' teachings were parabolic. The Master explained some of His actions and words to His disciples, and told them that they alone were permitted to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven. He did not explain all of His parables even to His Apostles. On the contrary, He said, "When the Spirit of Truth is come (at Pentecost and after), He shall guide you into all Truth, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have spoken unto you."

Since Pentecost, therefore, Jesus' followers can understand His teaching in a way that His earliest followers could not. It was not expedient that natural men should understand clearly the Divine Plan. St. Peter declared that if the Jewish rulers had known, they would not have crucified the Prince of Life. But only by Jesus' crucifixion could the Divine Plan be carried out. Therefore it was hidden from those for whom it was not intended.

This was a blessing; for if they had done those things under full light and knowledge, their guilt would have been much greater. They are, therefore, to be punished according to their limited light and knowledge.

The same principle obtains respecting the whole world; light increases responsibility. He that knew the Master's will, and did it not, shall receive many stripes; he that knew not the Master's will, and did things worthy of stripes, shall receive few stripes. Those begotten of the Holy Spirit as God's children have the highest responsibility, because they have the greatest knowledge. They alone could commit the sin unto death, as St. Paul explains.—Hebrews 6:16; 10:27.

The secret of the demarcation between the Church and the world is that the former has the Holy Spirit begetting to a new nature, with privileges of knowledge of God and His plans not granted others. Only the outlines of the Divine Character and Plan can be clearly discerned and appreciated by those not spirit-begotten.

existence of at least three herds falo was proved, each herd cong of bulls, cows and yearlings to umber of about forty-five. In rance they closely resemble the buffalo, of which they are the ants, but, being forced by necessity to live in the hilly wooded regions from settlement, they have developed their habits somewhat, and their feet and more agile than ancestors of the plains. In winter they may be found in two herds, roaming through the birch lands, but in winter they travel in bands for greater security against the wolves. In winter, when moving from one feeding ground to another, they travel in single file through the snow, making a narrow trail on which the snow is packed as solid as a rock. When they come to a new-grown slaughter meadow they here until all the feed is exhausted the whole area is compactly packed down. Unlike the western herds, which paw away the snow with their front feet, the buffalo uses its hoofs as a shovel and scatters the snow in clouds in order to reach the grass beneath. When alarmed the bulls stand on guard in the middle while the cows and yearlings make good their escape. Several pictures of the wood-buffalo have been obtained. The Indian Chief, Squirrel, who accompanied the party and who is most familiar with the region, estimated the number of buffalo there to be at least two hundred. Their worst enemy, at present, is the timber wolf and coyotes, which will be made to exterminate by raising the bounty in this region.

The Thorn on the Rose.

The old Bundeshesh of Zoroaster told that the rose grew fair and harmless until the entrance into the world of Ahriman, the evil one, bringing to this ancient narrative, the fruit of evil became universal and mankind suffered thereby, but in animals, as well as trees and the former is, however, conducive to the latter, for it makes a man breathe deeply, sets heart pumping more vigorously, aids his stomach and intestines to digest better, distracts the mind from care and promotes sound sleep. But great muscular strength often exists with poor power of resistance to disease.

The most obvious proof of this is in the resisting power of women. Woman's vitality is greater than man's. She resists starvation better; she is not so susceptible to cold or heat; she can stand a greater loss of blood; when poisoned she is more likely to recover, and how often do we see physical giants the most miserable of victims to seasickness while delicate women are eating their five meals a day in stormy weather on shipboard!—New York World.

Good Progress on Roads.

The colonization road work of the Ontario Government drives on apace in all parts of the province. Gangs numbering thousands of men in the aggregate, have been organized and the roads and highways in the newer sections show an activity unknown in past years in the spring season. The immense call of the work demands the appointment of hundreds of new overseers weekly, and that 1,100 in all will be required for the season, thus making a new record for the department.

It is confidently hoped that the close of the year's endeavors will witness the completion of the Sault-Sudbury trunk line, which will prove of immense advantage to the settlers who are congregating in the agricultural districts in that vicinity in great numbers. This enterprise was undertaken by the Government in 1907, and has shown steady progress since, although the difficulties have been great.

By the time the summer traffic is at its height, the road will be open from Sudbury to Coniston, and from thence work will be pushed with the double shift of men. The whole road is two hundred miles in length. One of the difficulties at the present time to contend with is the swollen condition of the Spanish river which has attained a height almost unprecedented and interferes at points with the constructive work.

One Kind of Sport.

"Now," said the chairman of the reception committee, "if it will suit your convenience we will conduct you through some of the greatest industrial establishments. I feel that it is safe to assure you that you will find them interesting, if not instructive."
"Thank you," replied the distinguished visitor, "but I would really prefer to put in the afternoon witnessing some kind of sport, if you have anything in that line that you consider worth while."

"Very well. We will go out to the race track. There are to be automobile, motorcycle and aeroplane races, and there is almost sure to be a serious accident."

"The Holy Nun of Viterbo."

"The Holy Nun of Viterbo," Sister Maria Benedetta Frey, whose death was announced recently after 52 years of acute physical suffering, was endowed with the prophetic spirit and many of her predictions have been verified. Her death created a great impression in the quiet old Italian town, where her reputation for sanctity and the heroic quality of her virtues were known and understood.
More than 30,000 mourners from all over Italy attended her funeral.

Canners' cows sold at from $2.75 to $3.25,
and bulls at $3.50 to $4 per 100 pounds.
A much stronger feeling developed in the market for sheep and lambs, and prices for the former advanced 50c, and for the latter 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the fact that a leading abattoir company of Toronto had a buyer on the market, who bought freely.
Trade was active, with sales of lambs at $7.25 to $7.75, and ewe sheep at $4.75 to $5 per 100 pounds. Calves were unchanged, with demand good. Choice calves were scarce.

In sympathy with the recent upward tendency of prices in Toronto for live hogs, a strong feeling prevailed in the market today, prices scoring an advance of 35c per 100 pounds. A few carloads of northwest hogs arrived last week and sold at $13.50 to $13.75 per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.25 to $6.75;

$4.75 to $5.50; milkers' choice, each, $7

$6 to $6.50; springers, $5 to $5.50.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7.25 to $7.75.
Hogs, f.o.b., $10.75 to $11.

GUN AT TOLL GATE.

Keeper Used It To Collect From Automobilists.

OTTAWA, July 29.—An effective means of collecting toll has come to light at Cascades, in the Gatineau district, where on Saturday, two parties of Ottawa motorists were compelled to hand over the tariff at the point of a shot gun. Owing to a flaw in their charters, obtained years before motor cars were in existence, it has been found that many of the toll roads in Quebec cannot legally tax automobiles and motorists have been refusing to pay.

On Saturday, two cars whose owners attempted to argue the matter at Cascades, were confronted with a gun in the hands of the keeper, and told to pass at their peril. Prosecution will follow.

Brockville Crossings Inspected.

BROCKVILLE, July 29.—Two members of the Board of Railway Commissioners came to Brockville to personally view dangerous crossings on the line of the G. T. R. west of here, for which a subway is agitated. They also visited the C. N. R. trestle and enquired about the standardization of the road. Crossing conditions prevailing in Brockville were looked into before leaving town.

When Germany Wins.

If the Germans win a war they make the losers pay heavily. Nine French hamlets on the German frontier are still engaged in paying off their respective shares of the indemnity of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. When the French Government was called upon to pay the indemnity it was arranged that every town in the country should pay its share, varying anywhere from $2,500 to $1,260,000.
At the end of 43 years the nine villages are still in arrears. Several of them are bankrupt, and they have appealed to the state.

degetting to a new nature, with privileges of knowledge of God and His plans not granted others. Only the outlines of the Divine Character and Plan can be clearly discerned and appreciated by those not spiritbegotten.
The Boat and the Storm in Antitype.

Our lesson typically considered, the boat would represent the Gospel Dispensation; the Master asleep, the Lord's apparent indifference to the storms of persecution assailing His Church; and the disciples' imploring cry, the prayers of the Church throughout the Age.

After our Lord's ascension, storms of persecution followed one another until the history of the true Church has been marked by severe trials of patience and faith. Often the Lord's people have wondered at the afflictions permitted to come upon them.
Verily, it seemed as though the Lord
did not care.

We might reason that if God had raised the storm which frightened experienced fishermen, surely Jesus would not have worked contrary to the Divine arrangement. We might also reason that Satan, "the Prince of the Power of the Air," might have thought to thwart the Divine arrangement respecting Jesus' crucifixion.
However, Jesus did not hesitate to quell the storm—to turn aside Satan's designs.

Storm of Trouble Is Near.

Bible students are convinced that the great storm of trouble upon the Church is very near. We need not prophecy concerning its character. We are to remember, however, that the majority of the storms upon the Church have come from professed people of God, rather than from the world. The Scribes, Pharisees and Doctors of the Law really crucified
Jesus, as St. Peter declared.—Acts 3:13-15.

Our expectation is that the Church will have its most trying experiences from professed brethren. Church Federation has a sincere and innocent look; but is not its purpose and object to fortify sectarianism? Should we not expect that, when it shall gain the measure of political influence and power indicated in the symbolic book of Revelation, those holding a simple faith in God and His Word, and striving to walk the narrow way, will be misrepresented, slandered, and eventually hindered from any part in the Master's service?

The Lord seems to indicate that His Church will be perfected on the Heavenly plane before the world's tribulation shall break in fury. True, the Church may escape in the sense of being enabled to live above the trouble—unaffected by it; but we think not. We believe that the Church will have passed into glory before the culmination of the world's Day of Wrath. In any event, the Lord's people will be content, knowing that all things are working together for good to those who love God.

Any man with a camera can "take

Oftentimes the Way.

When a man takes a dislike to you there is no use of trying to square it.
If you do him a favor he thinks he has you bluffed, and if you do him an injury he is justified in his first impression.—Washington Star.

A Man and a Dollar.

During courtship a man easily makes a dollar look like 80 cents.
After marriage he tries to make 30 cents look like a dollar. That is less easy.—Chicago News.

No legacy is so rich as honesty.—
Shakespeare.

Buttermilk Best.

Experiments by the poultry department of the O.A.C. with Buff Orping-Rhode Island Reds and White Leghorns showed that buttermilk produces the most and cheapest eggs, and no animal food in all instances is as good as buttermilk for hatching.

SLEEPWALKERS.

Sir George H. Savage Recounts Some Remarkable Cases.

The many remarkable stories which have been told of persons falling from windows or walking over heights while in a somnambulist state are supplemented by some extraordinary cases which are related by Sir George H. Savage, M.D., in The Practitioner.

One concerns two friends of his who were traveling in Sweden. One night they stayed at a cafe and occupied the same room. Two hours after retiring one of them got up, seized a water-bottle and hurled it against the wall. He then returned to bed and was perfectly unconscious of the act.

Referring to somnambulist automatism, the committing of acts quite unconsciously and without any recollection, Sir George mentions that everybody is subject to its milder forms. The pianist can play difficult music whilst holding conversation on general subjects. One can run up several flights of stairs in the dark, automatically recognizing when each flight is reached, without counting the steps.

But this automatism sometimes assumes a somewhat more serious form, and the case is mentioned of a country gentleman of middle age, active, healthy, and sober in habits, who came to London to consult his solicitor. Calling on a Tuesday morning he was told to call again at 3 p. m. He did not keep the appointment, and was not seen again until the following Friday, when he turned up at the office at three-thirty, apologizing for being half an hour late owing to

INDIGO.

Where the Beautiful Dye Is Derived and How It Is Manufactured.

Indigo, the most beautiful blue dye in the world is derived from a species of plant, growing in almost all tropical and sub-tropical countries. These plants are in the nature of a woody shrub attaining a height of three or four feet. The leaves are small, oval and of a dark, rich green color.

At intervals along the main stem are racemes, short stalks round which flowers cluster, and on these eventually appear number of small, pods containing seeds. While the plant is very hardy and will grow in almost any soil, provided the climate is to its liking, it requires a deep, rich loam which will admit of the penetration of the long tap roots, with a loose subsoil through which the moisture can percolate and reach the roots. The water supply plays an important role in the selection of an indigo plantation, since a great deal of water is employed in the manufacture of the dye.

About three months after being sown the plant begins to flower, and at this stage the fields are examined daily. When the leaves begin to fade and before the flower buds open the stems are ready for cutting. For this purpose a sharp machete is used, and the blow is dealt about three inches above the ground. Tied in bundles the plants are then carried to the sheds containing the vats, where they are subjected to the process of extracting the dye.

From the roots of the plants left in the field another crop will grow, all that is necessary being the usual weeding and a lookout for leaf-cutting ants and other enemies of the young shoots. In from 60 to 70 days it will be ready for cutting. When this is harvested, a third crop will grow and mature, and sometimes even a fourth crop may be obtained.

The dye is the result of the fermentation of the plants. It is particularly from the leaves that the coloring matter is derived, but in order to avoid the cost of labor which their separation from the stems would involve, and because in the flower buds and even in the stems there are traces of the dye, the entire plants are treated.

The plants are first put in a large vat known as the empapaelor. Sufficient fresh water is admitted to cover the plants, and they are then pressed down by heavily-weighted planks, and left to steep for 12 or 14 hours. The planks are then removed and the mass is violently stirred with long poles. When the sediment settles at the bottom of the tank, the liquid is run off into a smaller tank, called the batidor. In the batidor the thick and mucilaginous liquid is agitated for two or three hours without cessation. This arrests all further fermentation, which at this stage would spoil the dye.

At the same time this stirring, by continually bringing the liquid into contact with the oxygen of the air, causes certain chemical changes, the result of which is oxide of indigo (indigotin) which appears in blue particles. These, settling as sediment and eventually solidifying, give that beautiful pigment known as indigo blue. Just before the cessation of the stirring a coagulant of milk of lime is added in order to accelerate the precipitation.

The water in the second tanks is then drawn off, but not before all the sediment has properly settled. The viscous mass remaining is put into iron pans and boiled over a slow fire. Repeated straining through sacking concludes the process, and when thus rid of all the moisture the thick mass of blue paste that results is put into

An interesting description of the hospitality of Eskimos is given by 'mar Stefansson in his paper Quest In the Arctic," in Harper's magazine. At one stage of his adventure the writer found himself among mos who had never before seen people. He says:

"Like our distant ancestors doubt, these people fear most things the evil spirits that are to appear to them at any time—guise, and next to that they fear gers. Our first greeting had a bit doubtful and dramatic through being mistaken for spirits, but they had felt of us and talked with us and knew we were but common Strangers we were, it is true, I were only three among forty or and were therefore not to be feared. Besides, they told us they knew could harbor no guile from the dom and frankness with which came among them; for, they a man who plots treachery never his back to those whom he intends stab from behind.

"Before the house which they lately built for us was quite for our occupancy children coming from the village to announce their mothers had dinner ready houses were so small that it was convenient to invite all three into the same, one to eat; best was not etiquette to do so, as we know. Each of us was therefore to a different place. My host the seal hunter whom we had approached on the ice. His house, he said, be a fitting one in which offer me my first meal among for his wife had been born and west on the mainland coast than one else in their village, and even said that her ancestors belonged originally to their people were immigrants from the west. She would therefore like to ask questions.

"It turned out, however, that wife was not a talkative person motherly, kindly and hospitable all her countrywomen. Her first questions were not of the land from I came, but of my footgear. 'V my feet just a little damp, and she not pull my boots off for me dry them over the lamp? She boiled some seal meat for me, but had not boiled any fat, for she knew whether I preferred the boiled or raw. They always cut small pieces and ate it raw though but the pot still hung over the fire and anything she put into it be cooked in a moment.

"When I told her that my quite coincided with theirs, as I then did, she was delighted.

Calling on a Tuesday morning he was told to call again at 3 p.m. He did not keep the appointment, and was not seen again until the following Friday, when he turned up at the office at three-thirty, apologizing for being half an hour late owing to his watch having stopped. He was under the impression that the day was still Tuesday, and had no knowledge of what he had done during the intervening time. He recognized that he had not shaved, but seemed to have washed, dressed and eaten regularly.

Epilepsy is the cause of many acts of somnambulistic automatism, and Sir George tells the story of a man who had passed a brilliant school and university career and eventually entered the Government service. He secured an appointment abroad and left for the East in good health, but at Port Said he disappeared. After many months, when he was supposed to be dead, his friends heard that he was in a state of destitution far from where he landed, but he had no recollection of his movements after he left the boat. After careful nursing, he was ready for work.

He took a private secretaryship in the colonies, where he soon proved his ability, but he once more disappeared and was again found in a state of poverty in quite another part of the world. A third time he started work on a ranch and was making a success of it when he again vanished, and on his being discovered in a state of great distress some months after he was placed in an asylum.

The viscous mass remaining is put into iron pans and boiled over a slow fire. Repeated straining through sacking concludes the process, and when thus rid of all the moisture the thick marine blue paste that results is put into shallow trays and thoroughly dried by means of even and prolonged pressure. The concrete cakes of indigo when removed from the trays are cut into cubes of the usual size and sent to market packed in packs of rawhide.

A woman living in Ohio is the mother of six boys. One day a friend called on her and during the conversation said, "What a pity that one of your boys had not been a girl." It is made by pouring cold seal blubber into the boiling broth immediately a cooked meat has been taken out of the pot and stirring briskly until it comes nearly—but never quite—boil. This makes a soup of a type comparable to our English pea soup, but if the pot be allowed to boil the blood will coagulate and settle to the bottom. When the soup is a few degrees from boiling the seal blubber is added, and the soup is then stirred into the soup to a temperature at which it is freely drunk. By means of a supper the housewife then fills the musk ox horn drinking cups, signs one to each person. If the number of cups is short two or more persons may share the contents of one or a cup may be refilled when through with it and passed to the next. "After I had eaten my fill of seal meat and drunk two pints of blood soup my host and I sat farther back on the bed platform where we could sit comfortably against bundles of soft skins, while we talked of things."

DREAM TO COME TRUE

ALCHEMIST'S QUEST WILL BE REALIZED BY SCIENCE.

The Search for the Agency Which Would Turn Base Metals Into Gold Has Always Been Held Up
as Folly, But the Old Alchemists Were on the Right Track After All —Ramsay Hard at Work.

The hunt for gold has, during all the ages, led the seekers into strange places. Adventures and perils have clustered thick about the gold hunters who went afield for nature's precious product. But stranger by far has been the hunt of those who, first with the aid of charms and incantations, and later by the increased knowledge of chemistry, have sought to transmute the baser metals into gold.

For cycle on cycle men have pursued this golden quest. The world has been stirred time and again by the proclamation of the secret's discovery.

Only recently a great scientist, Sir William Ramsay, announced a discovery that brought up anew the old search of the alchemists. In his marvelous laboratory, Ramsay has succeeded in breaking down into a series of elements a gas that has heretofore been considered an element in itself, incapable of further reduction. That, he believes, may point the way for the change of other matter supposed to be unchangeable into a different form.

The old question arose at once. Did this mean that metals might be transmuted, that lead might be changed into gold?

"I do not know," this modern wizard declared, "it may mean such a possibility, though probably the cost of the process would be too great to make it worth while."

The same result in the transmutation of elements have been achieved by another Englishman working apart from Ramsay. Prof. J. Norman Collie, director of the chemical laboratory of the University of London and professor of organic chemistry, took electricity as his medium in reaching the same goal which Ramsay gained by the use of radium. Since the outcome of the experiment was the same, Prof.
Collie, less conservative than his colleague, has expressed himself with enthusiasm.

"We have now reached a stage," he said, "whence it will be possible to transmute any element, provided that we are able to generate sufficient energy. It is very likely that the near future will see the dream of the ancient alchemist fulfilled. But we are just on the fringe of the subject.
Where this clue will lead eventually nobody is able to guess."

These are the very latest bulletins of the search for gold in laboratories.
The earliest have come from so far back in history, that the dates are lost in the mist of years. Tradition says that the birthplace of alchemy was the ancient Chinese Empire. If so, that is the only credit that China receives, for the very name of the science is thought to have been derived from "Chem," the ancient name of Egypt, and the Arabian prefix
"Al," meaning "the." It is certain that alchemy first thrived and then gained a place as a "Divine Science" in the land of the Pharaohs.

The work that was done in those early days in the effort to discover nature's secret of gold making was almost entirely in the hands of the wise men at Alexandria. Arabs and

FRESH WATER FROM THE SEA.

Springs on Ocean Bed Are Made to Supply People of Moharek.

One of the hottest places in the world is the island of Moharek, which belongs to the Bahrein group in the Persian Gulf. It is not unusual there to find the thermometer standing at 140 degrees Fahrenheit.
Sometimes it rises still higher. Not even nightfall brings comfort; in Moharek the heat continues almost unabated through the hours of darkness.

Amid such heat the sufferer requires plenty of drinking water. But Moharek virtually has no drinking water. There is water to be had on the other islands, but transporting it is difficult, and the water gets well heated on the journey.

The people of Moharek, however, do not go without fresh water. They get it from the bottom of the sea.
Here and there, scattered over the floor of the harbor, are springs of pure fresh water that well up through the sand to mingle with the sea. It seems difficult to find these threads of fresh water, but long ago the thirsty islanders discovered the precious streams, and exact knowledge of them has been preserved through generation after generation.

It seems a still more difficult matter to obtain the water of the springs unspoiled by the salt water into which it gushes. But the natives have contrived a method perfectly simple and perfectly adequate. A diver takes a water-bag made of skins, the mouth of which is closed, and descends to the bottom of the harbor at the point where one of the springs issues. He inverts the bag carefully over the current of fresh water as it flows up from the sand, opens the mouth, and fills the skin and closes it again, and then returns to the boat waiting at the surface.
The cooling drafts thus plucked from the sea are retailed on shore for a trifling price, and constitute the sole water supply of Moharek.

It is not known how the natives first learned the existence of these hidden springs. One theory is that at some period in the past that which is now the bottom of the harbor was dry land. Little by little the sea encroached on the land, but as the springs were covered, one by one, the natives kept their knowledge of each, and that information serves them still. A simpler explanation is that the springs were discovered by pearl divers, for pearl-fishing is, and has been for centuries, the chief industry of the Bahrein islands.

science is thought to have been de- rived from "Chem," the ancient name of Egypt, and the Arabian prefix "Al" meaning "the." It is certain that alchemy first thrived and then gained a place as a "Divine Science" in the land of the Pharaohs.

The work that was done in those early days in the effort to discover nature's secret of gold making was almost entirely in the hands of the wise men at Alexandria, Arabs and Egyptians. They were the hermits and monks who lived and worked in the tiny cells of the ancient University, and they had but two aims in life: one was the discovery of the art of creating gold and the other the compounding of an elixir of life which would allow them to enjoy the gold forever. Neither purpose was fulfilled, although books without numbers were written by these seekers telling of processes by which unlimited wealth and eternal life might be gained.

In the early days Hermes Trismegistus was one of the greatest practitioners of the "Black Art." His teaching spread through Greece, the Roman Empire and Asia as his disciples scattered. One of these was Zosimus the Theban, who wrote in a perfect fog of words purporting to explain the art of making gold. There were many who wondered how great his wealth might be if he would only exercise this art himself. Doubtless it brought him great wealth, but only from the performance of miracles and the sale of formulas which no one could understand.

These magicians passed to the region where they doubtless found the secret they had sought so long in life, but the search on earth went merrily on. The Roman Emperor, Caligula, was told by his wise men that gold might be produced from orpiment (sulphide of arsenic). He expended much gold in extensive experiments, but got none in return. Diocletian, too, engaged in the hunt for the secret, and when he failed ordered all the Egyptian books on alchemy that could be found to be destroyed.

When Rome declined and the Dark Ages rolled in, monks and hermits in odd corners of Europe kept their furnaces and their reputations as wizards glowing brightly. The fifth century brought the Arthurian legend of the wondrous works of Merlin, who was reputed to have changed tin and lead into precious metal. Three hundred years later the leadership of alchemy turned east again for Geber, an Arabian, whose full name was Abou-Mousah-Dschafer-al-Sofi, declared that all metals were compounds of mercury and sulphur and tried to prove it. He believed that the differences between gold and silver and the baser metals were due to the relative quantities of the constituents and to the degree of purity exhibited by them. In his search to gain the highest purity which he believed would produce gold, Geber perfected the experiment of combining gold and mercury. To alchemists it seemed a miracle that hitherto unyielding metals could undergo such strange transformations.

Large Eagle Caught.

The first bald-headed eagle seen in the Niagara peninsula in many years was captured alive the other day on the farm of William Peacock, Louth Township, just west of St. Catharines. Several chickens had been missed of late on the farm, and a trap set with a dead chicken as a bait caught the bird, which weighs sixteen pounds. The eagle's mate was seen when the captured bird was taken from the trap, but it soon disappeared in a southerly direction.

The bird was taken to St. Catharines and was secured by Proprietor Russell of the Ellis House.

the natives kept their knowledge of each, and that information serves them still. A simpler explanation is that the springs were discovered by pearl divers, for pearl-fishing is, and has been for centuries, the chief industry of the Bahrein islands.

"Carmen Sylva," the Beloved Queen.

The Queen of Roumania, best known to the world as a poet, and by her pen name of "Carmen Sylva," is beloved by her people because of her sympathy with them in their suffering as in their rejoicing.

One day, walking in a hospital ward, she came upon an old soldier suffering from a compound fracture of the leg and threatened with gangrene. He would not give consent to the surgeons to amputate. He feared that should he do so he would be classed among the beggars.

"I am not a beggar," said the stout old soldier, proudly. "I'll lose my life but not my honor." "Tis true," said Carmen Sylva. "You are not a beggar, but I am." She threw herself on her knees at the bedside. "I have never prayed but to God," and, taking his hand, she added: "But I now supplicate you to listen to His wish and to mine. Let your leg be taken off and spare your life to your family, your country and to me, and—"

"And if I consent, what then?" "What then?" she exclaimed joyfully. "Why, I shall give you the most beautiful artificial leg that can be made in Europe, and when the war is over you shall come and dance at the palace with your sons." "I consent," he said, softly. "but you must hold my hand during the operation."

A Well-Bred Customer.

In the privacy of his home the village butcher was telling his wife of the arrival of a new resident.

"She came in to-day," he said, with enthusiasm, "and I can tell you she's a real lady, brought up select and exclusive. She don't know one cut o' meat from another, nor veal from mutton."

Energy.

Strong impulses are but another name for energy. Energy may be turned to bad uses, but more good may always be made of an energetic nature than of an indolent and impassive one.—John Stuart Mill.

Countering a Touch.

"Don't you think you're wasting your time talking the value of economy to Blank? He hasn't any money." "I know, but I have."

"Mademoiselle is excited. May I get a glass of water for mademoiselle?" May Percy turned back impatiently. "Now, don't take that tone. You'll be

Then with a quick flit she threw the shrouding hood aside.

Like my father next. I say some one has been kind to me, and I will see him to say goodby and thank him, and then, forsooth, Sir John"—she paused, then went on with sneering contempt—"the righteous, proper Sir John, who has lost half a fortune at cards and fought once about a girl, must throw up his hands in holy horror and my father grow sarcastic and suggest that I go over tonight to pay a formal visit to express my thanks in person for a paid service. Oh, I despise you men!"

She was miserably angry, but of a sudden her old April self predominated. An arch smile broke through the clouds on her face, and a gay laugh at some new thought swept away all trace of gloom.

"Do you really suppose, monsieur, my father meant that seriously? Am I not a dutiful daughter?" She stopped, struggling to contain her laughter.

At the angry outburst Dubarre had started to walk up and down the room. This last change was too much for a man helplessly, hopelessly in love. There was but one salvation. He stopped and bowed stiffly.

"I know one thing, which is, mademoiselle must be going."

It was a command.

Mistress Percy drew herself up proud-

"Is the leetle game of suppose too long, mademoiselle?"

"Go on, monsieur." Her tone was ample encouragement. He took up the game again more eagerly.

"Suppose, then, mademoiselle, he fulfils his oath. Could you"—a moment he paused for a word—"respect that man?"

"Yes—yes, monsieur," she cried impulsively.

Dubarre shook his head, smiling sadly.

"You speak too quick, mademoiselle. The game, our leetle 'suppose' game, is not finished. Suppose, mademoiselle, that young man met danger, great danger, greater than he knew. You know the danger, mademoiselle. It is the light that le bon Dieu puts by life's sea to save or wreck men—a woman. If he steers headlong, reckless, willing to die on the rocks, if only struggling for that light, could you—could you think such a man worthy?" He paused for a reply.

May Percy stood at the edge of dreamland, looking into the far away. At last she spoke, and it was very soft.

"You say the danger is sent by God, monsieur? Then man should try to conquer it."

He stepped toward her, his arms outstretched impulsively. "Mademoiselle, you are"—

She straightened and looked at him quickly. He stopped, for in that look there was some strange mingling of weakness, of sad determination against desire and of appeal that awed him. When she spoke, in so far as it could the tone echoed the look.

"As you were about to say, the affianced wife of Sir John Wilmerding, and you a French gentleman, monsieur."

He stepped back and bowed deeply, then moved toward the door.

"May I have the honor of seeing mademoiselle safely to the house?"

And then, almost as he said it, the door shook from a mighty pounding.

CHAPTER VIII.

AGAIN the door rattled and shook under the weight of a hammering sword hilt. Within the room the man and girl, struck still, stared blankly at each other. Surprise, dark anger, quick blushing shame and, last, white fear succeeded in her face. Her lips trembled, the hands clasped and unclasped nervously. Thrice she essayed to speak and could not. Only the eyes spoke plainly her fright and her appeal. Dubarre recovered first.

"Who is there?" he shouted, and the tone was not that of the humble dancing master in the least.

From without sounded a voice, hoarse with anger.

"Open! Open! 'Tis I! Open quickly!"

"Sir John!" It came at last, a low, faint gasp of horror from May Percy. Now she realized her false position—Dubarre's consideration of it. "What can I do?" she begged, low.

Silent, lightly as a cat, the Frenchman sprang to the door and noiselessly turned the key. Another second and he was back beside her.

"Sh!" he whispered. Then aloud: "And who may 'I' be? No unknown I's have entree here." Again he whispered to the girl, "Try the window." As in a dream, she tiptoed to it, but the heavy shutter was closed and can't kill both." Thus they stood gazing at each other, twin statues of despair.

From without the stern voice of Captain Thorncliffe punctuated their lethargy.

"Open, Dubarre, immediately or we'll force a way." And again a sword hilt began playing upon the door.

As at a deathbed one looks for the time, now Dubarre raised his eyes. His searching gaze, wandering from the girl, found the face of the big clock. Suddenly his own face brightened. Aloud, in laughing tones, almost triumphant, he cried:

"Mon Dieu! Don't, captain! I'm coming."

Seizing May Percy by the arm, he hustled her with desperate speed over to the big clock. The door of it came open easily. "Be quiet and trust me," he whispered. A moment more and the girl was locked in behind the wooden door. And the face of the clock above told nothing of it.

"I'm coming, messieurs; I'm coming." Dubarre was leaping across the room for the other door. And as he sprang by he jerked off his coat and threw it on the table. Quickly he turned the lock and threw open the door with a grand flourish.

"What has brought the humble dancing master this honor?" asked the obsequious, bowing Frenchman as Sir John Wilmerding and Captain Thorncliffe crossed the threshold.

"Are gentlemen to be kept waiting by a paid jumping jack?" demanded Sir John Wilmerding, striding to the center of the room.

For the fifth time the dancing master bowed to his waist.

"But see, monsieur," he protested, "I did not stop even to finish dressing."

Captain Thorncliffe turned impatiently to his companion.

"Come, Jack. We are not here to bandy words. State what you want."

The Frenchman looked from one to the other. "Messieurs, what has happened? You are wearing swords. Do you expect attack? What can be the matter?" In surprise and sudden anxiety he piled questions one upon another.

"Matter enough!" roared Wilmerding. "We are searching for Mistress Percy."

Dubarre was the picture of horrified astonishment. "Mon Dieu!" he cried. "Has some beast stolen her?" He rushed to the table and began slipping on his coat. "For her I, too, could wear a sword." He ran back and, seizing Sir John by the arm, began pulling him toward the door, all the while crying: "But come, come, monsieur! We are losing time! Your betrothed may be!"

Sir John shook him off with a fierce oath, so that the smaller Frenchman staggered back several paces.

"Scoundrel, she's here!"

Mistress Percy's dancing master straightened himself. A look of wonder crept into his face.

"'Tis a strange jest, monsieur." The words were spoken very slowly.

"If it only were a jest!" roared Wilmerding. "I tell you, I saw her come."

Straightway Dubarre was swept into equal rage. With his hands twitching, he stepped close to Wilmerding and thrust his own blazing eyes within a foot of the angry lover's. "If you say that, Englishman, like many another spy, you lie!"

Sir John sprang back and half drew

"No," answered Wilmerding shrilly. "Enough!" said Captain Thorncliffe. Dubarre drew a small knife from his belt. "Then by myself I'll make a he declared and, springing suddenly on the bed, thrust the knife repeatedly into the mattress.

"Is it enough?" he asked, after a dozen thrusts, looking up.

"Come down, Dubarre," or Thorncliffe, laughing in spite of self.

The Frenchman climbed down. Then, looking at his work, apologized the bed regretfully. "Poor it was cruel treatment after the times you have comforted me, shaking his head sadly, "when I of fashion seek by night the room renegade dancing masters, the things must be changed about."

Sir John had moved over beside mantel. "The window—she might get out by this."

Then he and Captain Thorncliffe struggled with the bar. It took several minutes of tussling before heavy shutter moved back. Dubarre laughed and thanked them for something that he had been unable to do for himself.

Now the searchers stood perplexed. The simple room seemed to afford no other hiding place. Suddenly Wilmerding caught sight of the closet. He trembled as nothing since his trance had made him tremble. was the quarry run to earth at last. "The closet!" he exclaimed and edged toward it, crying: "Watch French scoundrel, Hal. Don't let escape."

Dubarre's lips were smiling. In the eyes he had grown ten years. Wilmerding stumbled against the door. The Frenchman's smile seemed to show on his face.

"Hang the clock!" cried the lover reached for the closet door.

"Poor clock!" murmured the dancing master, and as Wilmerding paused before the door he added, "For a who has sought so earnestly, Sir Wilmerding displays rare diffidence meeting his betrothed."

Sir John whirled that way and his sword. "Be still, Frenchman." The other only continued in the reflective tone. "If a titled lover not keep his betrothed from the of a poor dancing master before

Then to work and down the room. This last change was too much for a man helplessly, hopelessly in love. There was but one salvation. He stopped and bowed stiffly.

"I know one thing, which is, mademoiselle must be going."

It was a command. Mistress Percy drew herself up proudly. "And you, too, M. Propriety—forgive me. I had not properly estimated the dancing master. He fairly bristles with unexpectedness. Possibly"—with the dainty, sarcastic smile that only made her face the more adorable—"monsieur has lost a whole fortune at cards and fought two duels over two girls."

Plagued, tempted past all endurance, the Frenchman lost his head. "A dozen would be nearer," he blurted, in sudden anger.

For a moment May Percy looked at him helplessly. Then the meaning of it all swept over her. She drew a long breath, while her eyes grew big and anxious.

"Then monsieur is"—He interrupted quickly. "Gaston Dubarre, poor French dancing master." Next he drew back and, with a low bow, added, "To Mistress Percy, grand lady."

Slowly the eagerness faded out of the girl's face. Her head drooped as she held out her hand kindly.

"Forgive me, monsieur. I did not mean to intrude upon a possible secret."

"Mademoiselle's own heart's kindness makes her forgiveness," he said brokenly.

"And I shall think"—Dubarre shrugged his shoulders. "Twere a foolish man who would try to curb a woman's thought, mademoiselle."

She continued, "That a French gentleman, a soldier perhaps, has honored a little English girl by teaching her to dance."

Now he shook his head, smiling slightly, but when he spoke his tone was deeply serious.

"And a poor French dancing master will know that le bon Dieu permits sometimes one of his own bright children to steal down from above to give those struggling below jes' one leetle foretaste, a promise of the kingdom of le bon Dieu. Then—he snatches it away."

With a shrug, the man walked to the mantel and leaned against it, dejected, hopeless beyond further speech. The girl's face was a reflection of his attitude. After a pause she spoke timidly, "But the children from above, as you call them, they stay on earth, monsieur."

He turned and came to her quickly, sudden resolve in every movement.

"Mademoiselle," he said, and now in turn his tone was eager, "could a man pretend to be what he is not?"

"That would depend, monsieur," she interrupted softly.

"Suppose, mademoiselle"—Dubarre spoke more carefully, weighing every word—"suppose a man had sworn an oath to her he loved best in the world"—May Percy started—"suppose, mademoiselle"—He smiled. "Ah, this is all a leetle game of suppose—that young man gets release from his chief, forswears his friends, for a time gives up his life and, meanly attired, at great peril attempts to follow out the oath made to her he loved most as she lay dying."

The Frenchman paused. His quick eye had noted the girl's signs of embarrassment.

turned the key. Another second and he was back beside her.

"Sh!" he whispered. Then aloud: "And who may 'I' be? No unknown 'I's have entree here." Again he whispered to the girl, "Try the window." As in a dream, she tiptoed to it, but the heavy shutter was closed and barred.

"Open! Open at once, I say!" Sir John's voice bore wild rage now. Every instant the door threatened to give way under his furious assault.

May Percy had stolen back to Dubarre. "The shutter—I can't manage it," she whispered faintly.

And now from beyond the door another voice broke in upon them. "'Tis Sir John Wilmerding and I, Captain Thorncliffe. We wish to speak with you, M. Dubarre."

"Captain Thorncliffe! Oh, I'm lost!" and, moaning thus piteously, May Percy seemed about to faint. Dubarre caught her almost roughly by the arm.

"Keep courage. You must hide," he muttered. His touch restored her. The Percy pluck began to assert itself. Her mouth set, and she looked at him understandingly. Aloud he cried:

"Pardon, monsieurs, pardon. I'm coming," and he started noisily for the door. The pounding without ceased.

"Well, hurry," shouted Sir John Wilmerding. "We can't wait all night."

May Percy rushed behind the bed. Dubarre darted after her. "Not here," he muttered fiercely, "the closet." Then he sprang to the mantel, knocked off the candlesticks and kicked over an andiron to make a big crash.

"Mon Dieu," he cried, loudly angry, "there goes the candle. That comes of being in a hurry." Next he was beside May Percy, opening the closet door and shouting all at once.

"Patience, messieurs! In a moment—when I get a light."

Sir John Wilmerding was becoming wilder every second of delay.

"We'll make light enough when we get in," he roared.

Dubarre had stepped into the closet with May Percy. Now they came out, he shaking his head.

"Hopeless!"

"Can nothing be done?" whispered the girl in low tones of agony.

Again the man shook his head. "I

Straightway Dubarre was swept into equal rage. With his hands twitching, he stepped close to Wilmerding and thrust his own blazing eyes within a foot of the angry lover's. "If you say that, Englishman, like many another spy, you lie!"

Sir John sprang back and half drew his sword. Captain Thorncliffe leaped beside him in time to catch his arm.

"Steady, Jack, steady," advised the captain soothingly. "I knew there must be some mistake."

The Frenchman's anger had changed to cold contempt now.

"And a mistake monsieur will rue when Mistress Percy hears of it," he sneered.

Sir John Wilmerding shook off the restraining arm bitterly.

"Loose me, Hal. I tell you I saw her come not twenty minutes ago. I watched the door and sent for you that I might have witness when I killed the low born lover."

He turned again fiercely on the sneering Frenchman.

"Quiet, Jack. Be calm," soothed Captain Thorncliffe.

Dubarre bowed with most exaggerated politeness.

"Monsieur greatly honors the poor dancing master when he admits him as a rival."

"And you, Dubarre, be silent!" ordered Thorncliffe sternly.

Again the Frenchman bowed humbly.

"The poor dancing master should always strive to please monsieur. And of a truth, if I'm to die for it, it pains me deeply that, dying, I cannot at the last please Sir John by producing the lady." His manner expressed only great sorrow that his failure to do so should give the lover pain.

Sir John shot black looks all about the room.

"If she's here we'll find her," he declared fiercely.

Eagerly Dubarre seized the opportunity for vindication.

"Yes, yes. Let us search." As he spoke he rushed to the bed and laid hold of the curtains. Sir John winced visibly at that. It did not escape the Frenchman. Still holding the cloth, he turned, blandly questioning.

"Pray, where did the titled lover expect to find his mistress? Was she discussing theology with the humble dancing master?" Then, without waiting for reply, he jerked down the curtains, drew them off the bed and began to shake them in violent style.

"Is the fellow mad? What are you doing?" demanded Captain Thorncliffe.

Dubarre looked up apologetically. "One never can tell, monsieur. I thought perhaps a girl, a half girl or possibly a girl and a half might be hidden in the curtains."

Thorncliffe exclaimed sternly: "Dubarre, enough of this trifling."

The dancing master was all eagerness to please. "As monsieur le capitaine wishes," he said suavely, "but monsieur knows all manner of queer things may happen when a titled lover traces his affianced bride to the room of an abject dancing master." Then, turning from the captain to Sir John, he made a gesture toward the mattress. "Will monsieur thrust his sword into the bed?" The lover winced again. "I'm sure," added Dubarre, with great earnestness, "she must scream if it touches her."

"Cease such unseemly jesting!" shouted the badgered one.

The Frenchman became mildly agrieved. "I did not jest, monsieur.

"The closet!" he exclaimed and toward it.

Wilmerding still wavered before closed door.

"Hal," he said at last, "I'm no self. I can't face her. Let me the Frenchman. You open the door. And as for you"—raising his above Dubarre—"I'll—"

With a quick jerk Captain Thorncliffe had pulled open the closet door. "It's empty!" he cried in joyful triumph.

Wilmerding's sword fell to the floor with a crash. The lover shook himself for very joy.

"Thank God!" he said earnestly.

The Frenchman looked at both with a sneer. "Are you quite sure she's not here?" he asked.

"I was before I came," declared Thorncliffe heartily.

Dubarre turned now on Wilmerding. "Twas a brave deed, monsieur, the titled lover with sword on his hip, to insult the poor, unarmed dancer."

"No harm was done," blurted John, the more brutally to cover his confusion.

The Frenchman merely looked at him. "Doubtless Mistress Percy will be glad to hear that she was innocent," he said.

Captain Thorncliffe had to bite his lips at that. "Don't push it, Dubarre," he urged.

The dancing master continued to John: "But is monsieur sure she's innocent? One can tell of women. Is there no other place to look? Possibly she has hidden behind the face of the clock. It stopped this morning shaking up may do it good."

Captain Thorncliffe felt called to interfere. "Enough, enough, Dubarre!" he begged. "Don't you let's sorry?"

"Yes," said Wilmerding. "I'm sorry." He thrust his sword into its scabbard and stalked toward door.

The Frenchman looked after the departing lover. "One would think I was sorry he had not found her the vindicated man sarcastically.

Captain Thorncliffe held out his hand. "I know you will say of this, Dubarre. I am grieved jealousy should have led Jack to folly. You have acted splendidly throughout."

Dubarre smiled as they shook hands. "You should know," he said, "it was sad. Pierre came in wearing a long cloak 'gainst the rain."

"Enough?" he asked, after a moment, looking up.

The Frenchman climbed down. Looking at his work, apostrophized he regretfully. "Poor bed, cruel treatment after the many oaths I have comforted me, but," he said sadly, "when ladies come on seek by the rooms of the dancing masters, then all must be changed about."

He had moved over beside the window—she might have seen this.

He and Captain Thorncliffe looked at the bar. It took several minutes of tussling before the butter moved back. Dubarre and thanked them for doing so, that he had been unable to do himself.

The searchers stood perplexed. The room seemed to afford no hiding place. Suddenly Wilmerding caught sight of the closet door. He called as nothing since his enemy made him tremble. Here he ran to the earth at last.

"What?" he exclaimed and rushed at it, crying: "Watch the scoundrel, Hal. Don't let him escape. His lips were smiling. About the time he had grown ten years. Then he stumbled against the clock. The Frenchman's smile seemed frozen.

"Clock!" murmured the dancing master as Wilmerding paused before the door he added, "For a man sought so earnestly, Sir John Wilmerding displays rare diffidence at his betrothed."

He whirled that way and drew a sword. "Be still, Frenchman." The lover only continued in the same tone. "If a titled lover can hide his betrothed from the room dancing master before mar-

went away again without it. That fooled him. Good night, monsieur."

Captain Thorncliffe followed Sir John Wilmerding out. Dubarre locked the door after them. Next he straightened, with a monstrous sigh of relief, and in the candle-light his face was lined with a great fatigue. A moment he stood thus, then stepped quickly across the room. He turned the key and opened the door of the clock.

"They are gone, mademoiselle. Now I shall see you safely to the house."

From her narrow hiding place the girl looked out on him with her eyes full of a wonderful light that had never showed there so plainly before.

"For my good name what return can I make to the noblest gentleman I ever knew?" she asked.

Dubarre bowed low over her extended hand.

"None to the dancing master—just now, mademoiselle," he said, with meaning.

Then Mistress Percy stepped out from the clock, and as she did so the figures of two men passed the window. Sir John Wilmerding, on the outside, started forward, but Captain Thorncliffe thrust one hand over the lover's mouth and pushed him back into the shadow, and from the captain's lips came the muttered exclamation:

"By gracious! She was in the clock!"

CHAPTER IX.

CAPTAIN THORNCIFFE cast the week old Gazette aside with an impatient gesture.

"Nothing in the paper," he muttered; then went on smoking furiously and thinking just as hard.

Truly the genial captain had enough to occupy his mind. First, there was the Courtleigh girl, who had been most strangely perverse of late, even for her. She always took a large share of the captain's thoughts. Then loomed up Wilmerding's love affair, with the complication of May Percy's visit to the dancing master's room the night before.

When they saw her through the window by main force Thorncliffe had kept the jealous lover from rushing in to kill the Frenchman. They had followed Dubarre and the girl from the lodge to the big house and witnessed the most respectful adieu. With great difficulty the watchers had crept so close that they could overhear Dubarre thank Mistress Percy for her kindness in coming to tell him goodbye and deplore the necessity that compelled him to hide her in the clock to save appearances.

Dubarre had kissed her hand respectfully and gone away. The girl had seemed stunned or sad or not herself or something, for Thorncliffe could swear she said only: "Adieu, monsieur. May heaven keep you safe!"

Now, all these things were sufficient to worry the blunt soldier. He had declared earnestly to Wilmerding that he believed the visit innocent and had induced the jealous lover to promise to wait until Dubarre had gone, then get a quiet explanation from Mistress Percy. Whether or not the hot tempered Sir John could keep his head and his promise was an open question. The captain had come out to his favorite bench on the lawn, the one at which Pierre had played for the feast, to consider the matter.

But thinking did no good, and impatiently he turned back to the discarded Gazette. He picked it up again, and almost as he did so his glance caught an offer, in addition, £100 for the capture of 'French Percy.'"

The captain paused and looked up. "And to think that little more than five and one-half feet of dead escape-grace should be worth £100!"

"But he is such a brave soldier," said Mistress Courtleigh.

"Do girls always love brave soldiers?" asked Captain Thorncliffe.

"Would Sir Henry Percy arrest his cousin?" she countered.

"And you?" she persisted.

"Perhaps," he laughed. "You see, I owe him one. I'll ride over to the gar- rison today and tell them to be on the lookout."

"Will you take your reward before you go?" she smiled, holding up the rose tantalizingly before him.

"And more, too!" he cried, seizing both hand and flower in his big grasp.

The girl gave a little scream. "What a grip, captain! Do you always?"

"I—I—didn't mean to hurt," he blundered. "You know, Ethel, I beg—I mean—"

She interrupted, laughing. "Come, I'll tell your fortune with the flower."

They bent over side by side with their heads close together. She held the flower, he pulled off the petals, and as one they repeated:

"One I love,
Two I love,
Three I love, I say;
Four I love with all my heart!"

Unnoticed May Percy had slipped across the lawn. She crept just behind the pair on the bench, then put her hands over her eyes.

"I'm not looking."

As if by magic the soldier and the girl stood upright a good yard apart.

"We were—er—just seeing how many leaves there are on a rose," murmured Mistress Courtleigh confusedly, holding up a dilapidated flower.

May Percy came gayly around the bench to kiss her blushing friend. "And to think, sweet, that I never knew before you were nearsighted," she said sympathetically. Then, turning to Captain Thorncliffe: "And how hard it must be on a brave soldier to have poor eyes. How can you see to shoot? And yet they say you are a famous shot."

Captain Thorncliffe drew himself up stiffly.

"My eyes are very good," he said. "Sometimes they see strange things."

Like a flash came the reply: "And being an English soldier the tongue never tells them. But, captain, would you ask Sir John Wilmerding to meet me here? I wish to speak to him."

Her woman's intuition told her that they knew. The Percy headlong courage sought quick battle if it must come.

Captain Thorncliffe bowed ceremoniously. "Certainly, Mistress Percy," he said, and started away to find Sir John.

May Percy turned to her friend. "Now, sweetheart, what were you doing? Tell me all about it."

Ethel Courtleigh's face showed only blank surprise. "Doing? Why, nothing," she said, "but reading in the paper about your cousin."

"My cousin?" asked Mistress Percy.

"Yes, the French Percy, your over the water cousin. Here it is," and she offered the other girl the paper.

May Percy ran through the piece hastily. "Why, father would never give him up!" she exclaimed as she finished.

"Indeed he would, though!" cried Mistress Courtleigh, with conviction.

"True," he admitted, "your father's and mine. It was their plan first."

"Yes, Sir John." The eyebrows raised and the dainty nose tilted a bit more superciliously. "As I have remarked once before, you have always been a very dutiful son." Her tone was one of polite encouragement to a little boy, for a good deed. Then as they faced each other Gaston Dubarre prepared for his going away and, wearing the coat left by Jacques Fournay, the spy, came along the garden path from the lodge. He started to cross the lawn, but seeing Sir John and Mistress Percy talking, paused at the bench to wait until they should move away. His eye caught the paper thrown aside by May Percy. He picked it up curiously. In a moment Dubarre was reading with eager haste.

Meanwhile the lover who came out to demand had instead drifted ignominiously into helpless supplication.

"May, you know not what you are saying. I have been your lover since childhood, since those days when we played make believe knight and lady in the park together, and I defended you with my wooden sword and killed a vicious dog for you. I don't remember when I haven't loved you. The love has grown with me. It is part of me. I couldn't rid myself of it if I would. Once we were friends and playmates. Then you liked me. I thought you loved me, and I spoke to your father. He was glad. You were willing. In the past few weeks has come a change. Why is it?"

Mistress Percy had taken a flower out of her belt and was pulling the petals from it in absent fashion. Now she yawned, looked up into her lover's abject face, then, with a shrug, cast the mutilated flower far from her. No words were needed with that answer. Sir John's teeth came together hard.

"What o'clock is it?" said Mistress Percy, yawning. "It must be almost noon come," and she turned toward the castle.

The man sprang after her and caught her arm. "I won't be put off this way!" he exclaimed. "You have agreed to marry me. I have your and your father's word. The betrothal has been publicly announced. I'm ready to perform my part of the contract, and I demand to be treated as your betrothed."

The girl released herself and faced him. The scant Percy patience was all gone now.

"Ah, Sir John demands!" she sneered. "Has Sir John always in thought and word and deed treated May Percy with the consideration and respect due his affianced wife? Let Sir John question himself closely on this point."

At that speech Wilmerding went white and weakened. Only dogged desire kept him pleading.

"If there was any lingering hesitation or you did not expect to fulfill it, why did you promise?"

The dancing master had finished a second perusal of the story about "French Percy." Now he slipped the paper in the breast pocket of his coat and, attracted by Sir John's loud speech, stood up to listen. He rose just in time to hear May Percy, losing an instant her steely calm, blurt angrily: "Because, loving no other, to gratify my father's heart's desire and save him from disappointment I would even marry you, John Wilmerding, though I did not love you."

promise was an open question. The captain had come out to his favorite bench on the lawn, the one at which Pierre had played for the feast, to consider the matter.

But thinking did no good, and impatiently he turned back to the discarded Gazette. He picked it up again, and almost as he did so his glance caught an item that made him start. He took his pipe from his mouth to whistle, then laid it on the bench while he read the item through, his eyes all the time growing bigger from astonishment until at the close he slapped his leg and burst out with a hearty roar:

"By the Lord Harry, it's just like him!"

Ethel Courtleigh, coming along the garden path, heard the enthusiastic roar.

"Just like who, captain?" she asked.

Captain Thorncliffe sprang to his feet and snatched off his cap, all confusion.

"I—er—ah—beg pardon—deed I do, Mistress Courtleigh. I—er—didn't know you were there."

"I think you might ask me to sit down," she said, laughing at his confusion.

Now, the captain's idea of war was to go right after the enemy.

"May I have that rose?" It was his very first question after they sat down. She looked at him in mock surprise.

"Why, how impetuous you soldiers are! You'd take a town before you begin the siege."

"Some citadels are best taken by storm," he answered meaningly.

Mistress Courtleigh threw up her head. "No, sir," she sniffed. "This rose shall be a reward of merit. I'll give it to you when you tell me what interested you in the paper just now."

Thorncliffe shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, that!" he said carelessly.

"Oh, that!" she mocked him. "Yes, you said, 'It's just like him.' Now just like who?"

"Why, that harum scarum young fool, Percy Latapie, of course. The scapegrace is in England."

"The French Percy in England!" cried the girl in horrified tones.

"Truly."

"Why, we shall all be killed!" she exclaimed in mock terror.

"Or led captive," he laughed slyly.

"But how do you know?"

"Listen." The captain picked up the paper and began to read:

"Word has just reached the war office that the notorious bandit known as 'French Percy' has left France and is supposed to be in England. Heretofore his disappearance from the French army has always presaged some disaster to England. He is the man who entered the English camp in the guise of a trooper and stole the papers of the commander in chief, escaping safely with them and delivering them into the hands of the French marshal, Soult. Numerous other desperate enterprises are credited to this Percy Latapie. It is said to be his boast that he has never failed in anything yet undertaken. From a source within the French lines it has been learned that 'French Percy' asked leave of Napoleon, saying that he wished to visit his family home in England in accordance with the dying wish of his mother, who passed away a year ago. His mother belonged to the well known family of Percys on the east coast. She ran away years ago with the young Vicomte de St. Croix. The family estate by entail has become the property of Sir Henry Percy, a stanch Tory, who would be only too glad to deliver over his renegade cousin. The place is now being watched. It is safe to wager that 'French Percy' will fail in this, his last daring escapade, or if he gets to the castle will certainly be captured. In that event the death of a spy awaits him. A reward of 500 guineas has long stood for the body of this Percy Latapie, dead or alive. The commander in chief himself

"Yes, the French Percy, your over the water cousin. Here it is," and she offered the other girl the paper.

May Percy ran through the piece hastily. "Why, father would never give him up!" she exclaimed as she finished.

"Indeed he would, though!" cried Mistress Courtleigh, with conviction. "Captain Thorncliffe said so, and the captain is going to ride over to the gar- rison this evening and warn the sol- diers to be on guard."

"Eff!" A sudden wonderful thought seemed to strike May Percy. Her cheeks became red, her eyes big and sparkling. "Suppose"—she began.

"Oh, I know what you were going to say!" cried the other. "I thought so, too, as I read it. You are thinking of the two Frenchmen who came yester- day and slipped away last night. The little one, he had Percy's gray eyes. I wish he had stayed. We might have found out for sure."

"Yes," said Mistress Percy absently, "we might." Apparently she had lost all her enthusiasm, for she sat think- ing deeply.

And now Captain Thorncliffe was bringing on Sir John. They came across the lawn together, talking low. "You ought to have allowed me to set- tle it last night," declared Wilmerding bitterly.

Captain Thorncliffe laid a soothing hand upon his arm.

"Be calm, Jack. 'Twas but a girl- ish freak. All will be right. You must not fight or kill him. You should not have worn your sword."

They were too close now for confi- dences, and the captain cried aloud to the girls, "Ah, Mistress Percy, see, I've brought your lover, and now I claim my reward."

"Do you think she is worth the serv- ice, captain?" laughed May Percy.

Mistress Courtleigh drew herself up with assumed haughtiness.

"Well, if you don't want me—come, captain." And they started for the garden.

Mistress Percy and Sir John looked at each other, and both knew that each understood.

CHAPTER X.

FOR quite a minute the man and girl looked at each other.

"You sent for me?" he ques- tioned after a pause.

Mistress Percy raised her eyes, steely now, and looked Sir John over casually.

"I only wanted to tell you," she re- marked in an even, polished tone, "that I think Dorothy Stanfield would make you a much better wife than I. She wants the position, you see."

"A mere excuse which means you don't," he blurted angrily. "You wish, then, to be released from our com- pact?"

Already she had forced him on the defensive.

"Do you wish so much now to marry me?" she asked with meaning.

"Certainly you must have good cause for your decision," he retorted.

Her eyes flashed a bit, but she con- trolled herself.

"I might say 'because'—that's a wo- man's reason—and, besides, it would save your self love a few wounds."

Sir John bowed. "Mistress Percy is strangely considerate. But do you re- member you have promised to become my wife?"

The girl raised her hands protest- ingly.

"Don't, don't! Why remind me of my misfortunes? Remember it was my and, attracted by Sir John's loud speech, stood up to listen. He rose just in time to hear May Percy, losing an instant her steely calm, blurt angrily:

"Because, loving no other, to gratify my father's heart's desire and save him from disappointment I would even marry you, John Wilmerding, though I did not love you."

Dubarre, standing beside the tree, smiled quickly and drew in a long breath. For an instant Sir John was stunned.

"I presume, then, that now you do love some one," he said at last bitterly. That was a home thrust.

"Do you?" the girl sneered and raised her chin very high, but her cheeks were flaming. The discarded lover saw the red signals, and instantly his fierce jealousy swept him into rage.

"Yes, and I came here to have a settlement with you about that very thing, and I will have it," he cried.

Mistress Percy stiffened.

"What do you mean?"

Rage blinded, Sir John swept on.

"And I'd have had it last night but for Thorncliffe!"

At the words Dubarre started sud- denly, then stopped as quickly and gripped the back of the bench to hold himself behind the tree.

"Sir John Wilmerding," the girl cried, "my father shall!"— But the man had swept too far past the point of reason to heed her warning.

"Yes, he shall know it, though 'twill break his proud heart. You'll beg in vain for an honest name then. Sir Henry will be proud—all will be proud of you—a Percy, with a lowborn lover." May Percy suddenly became white like death, then burning rage and shame made her face like fire. Her eyes opened wide, her nostrils dilated. She trembled and could not speak.

The blood was all gone from under Dubarre's nails, and he held to the bench to keep himself from starting forward. Now the girl came close to Sir John.

"Do you presume, sir?" she almost whispered, so low and fierce the tone.

"I don't presume," he cried. "I know, for I saw you in his room last night—the room of that lowborn French jig stepper."

From the jig stepper, standing just out of sight beside the bench, came a low gasp of agony. He let go his hold, then quickly slipped out of his coat, dropping the garment upon the bench and laying his hat upon it. Next he rolled up the right sleeve of his shirt above the elbow and stood upright again beside the tree, waiting—tensely waiting.

May Percy was sneering now. "A brave lover, truly, to doubt the honor of his affianced wife!" Then her anger blazed out once more beyond all bounds. "Now, I'll never marry you—no, never! Never!"

The tense listener behind the tree gave a great, heaving sigh of joy. That last made it all worth while to him.

Trees and the Air.

According to a reliable computation, a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men, as many as a dozen or a score. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is estimated at a hundred gal- lons, and a single square yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and under side of the leaves, can decom- pose about a gallon of carbonic acid in a day.

EIGHTEENTH ARTICLE. RAISING SUGAR BEETS.

By HARVEY W. WILEY, Former Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry and Former Director Department Sugar Beet Experiment Station, Nebraska.

THE successful growing of sugar beets is an art that one acquires by practice. The farmer who has made a success of raising other crops will quite often fail at first in this one, as the methods of cultivating ordinary crops do not apply in the case of sugar beets.

In the manufacture of sugar from the beet the farmer plays an important part by supplying beets in an adequate quantity and of a high quality, but beyond that he can hardly hope to enter the field. The manufacture of beet sugar is an industry entirely distinct from agriculture. From the nature of the process it is quite improbable that any simple method of home manufacture of beet sugar will ever prove commercially successful. The juice of the beet is extracted with difficulty.

Experience has shown that the sugar beet reaches its highest development in north temperate latitudes.

This isothermal line for the United States begins near the city of New York and passes up the Hudson river to Albany; thence turning westward, it runs near Syracuse and passes in a southwesterly direction, touching the shore of Lake Erie near Sandusky, O.; turning thence in a northwesterly direction, it enters Michigan and reaches its highest point in that state near Lansing; then going in a southwesterly direction, it enters the state of In-both north and south, in which the sugar beet will be found to thrive, but this will be due to some exceptional qualities of the climate or soil and not to any favorable influence of a higher or lower temperature. A study of the location of the sugar factories operating today will show that only five factories are outside of these lines.

Although conditions of temperature must be taken into consideration in selecting sites for beet sugar factories, those of rainfall must also be studied. The sugar beet requires a certain amount of moisture in order to produce its normal crop. This moisture must be derived either from precipitation in the usual way or from irrigation, or else the soil must be of that particular quality which will allow subterranean moisture to reach the roots of the plants.

The experience of more than twenty years in California and ten years in Colorado has shown that the climatic data, regarded as of prime importance in beet culture in Europe, cannot be regarded as rigidly applicable to this country. The successful growth of sugar beets in the arid regions of our country, with irrigation, has introduced a new factor into the science of beet meteorology. While the arid area on which beets can be grown without irrigation is probably confined almost exclusively to the coast valleys of California, the successful commercial production of sugar beets in Utah and Colorado has opened a new and extensive field. What has taken place in these states is being rapidly duplicated in Idaho, a beginning has been made in Montana, and the time is undoubtedly coming when beets will be grown in Wyoming and probably throughout the whole arid region.

The northern parts of our eastern and middle states and the states of Oregon and Washington have at least an equal chance for the successful production of beet sugar with the fields of Germany and France. The irrigable parts of the great southwest have advantages of soil and climate which will enable them to enter into competition in the production of beet sugar.

The high cost of good irrigation renders it imperative that the areas under culture be devoted to a crop which is capable of producing a more valuable yield than is afforded by cereal culture. If a net profit of from $10 to $20 per acre can be secured, from $100 to $200 per acre can be paid for the land. It is estimated that nearly 80,000,000 acres of land in the arid regions of the United States may eventually be irrigated, being nearly one-fifth of the total area. Of this area perhaps 10 per cent is capable of easy and speedy irrigation. Farmers who raise beets for a sugar factory are not left entirely to their own resources in growing the crop. They enter into a contract with the factory management which outlines the methods to be employed.

Then the factory employs an agricultural superintendent and a corps of assistants whose duty it is to go among the growers giving instructions and suggestions regarding the selection and preparation of the soil, planting, cultivation, time of harvesting, etc. These men are of course well informed on all phases of beet culture, and they are usually able to make valuable suggestions in regard to the cultivation of other crops grown in rotation with beets. Their instructions and influence therefore tend to improve the

Every farmer should understand that he cannot continuously grow any crop on the same ground and secure maximum results. Beets do best after alfalfa, corn or small grains.

A good scheme of rotation is first wheat, then beets, then clover for two years, the last crop being plowed under; then potatoes, wheat and beets in the order mentioned. If alfalfa can be grown it should be included in the rotation of crops; also in some sections potatoes do well in the rotation. Beets do well after small grain crops, because these, being harvested early, leave the ground ready for late autumn plowing, an important point in successful beet culture.

The field in which beets are to be planted should be selected and plowed in the late autumn to the depth of at least nine inches. As a rule, the plow in each furrow should be followed by a subsoiler, which will loosen the soil to the depth of six or seven inches more.

Hand planting of the seed may be practiced when a very small plot is to be put in beets, but where a field embracing an acre or more is to be planted it is not convenient. In such cases planting by drill is best.

The beets should be covered to a depth of one-half inch to two inches, according to the state of the soil.

In the matter of space between rows there is considerable variation. In some cases the rows are made only sixteen inches apart and in others as wide as twenty-eight inches.

The cost of growing an acre of beets depends on so many varying factors as to render it impossible to give an estimate which is reliable for every locality.

It is probable that the actual cost to our farmers for the first few years of the beet industry did not exceed $25 to $35 per acre and in many instances fell below these figures.

It is reasonably certain, accidents of season aside, that a net profit of from $8 to $15 per acre may be expected from the proper culture of the sugar beet in localities near a factory when all the conditions of the best methods of culture are fulfilled.

The byproducts from beet culture on the farm are the tops and leaves, which are commonly used for feeding cattle. Some farmers, however, turn them under as a fertilizer. When used as a feed the beet tops can be eaten by the cattle on the field where they have been grown. If they are fed in stalls the manure should be returned to the field.

THE ONTARIO INDIAN

He Is the Most Superstitious in North America.

There are no people on the continent as superstitious as the Indians. W. W. Fox in The Toronto Free Press says: "The Indians do not talk about beliefs to whites, and it is only a white man has done them wrong or has been so associated with them that they look upon him as a friend that their stoicism thaws and one realizes that beneath the stern exterior there is just as much real nature, just as much love for or a romp as there is with the 'white man' (white man)."

Here is an illustration of their superstition: One whom I well know of the most intelligent, his wife and he were at Moose Factory, bought a rifle. I asked him if he had vet. "No," he said, "I first saw it, then I have got all along." Next day he died of a heart attack, and after that did not shoot rabbits, hares or ridges. He believed he would have luck.

Another superstition amongst these Indians is that it is unlucky to live in a teepee where one of their number has died. I have known them to fire under such circumstances, at an unusual thing for them to do even in the depths of winter when death has invaded it.

Last year they had an outbreak of diphtheria amongst them in Lake. They were quarantined the death of one of their number the town supplied them with food. But, although they were exempt of free rations, they would remain, and so, after the burial away during the night. Now is anything an Indian dislike traveling in the night, and he diana near South Bend, passes through Michigan City, then in a northwesterly course continues through the cities of Chicago and Madison, reaching its highest point near St. Paul; thence it extends in a southwesterly direction until it enters the state of South Dakota, where it turns again northwest and reaches its highest point in Dakota just above the forty-fifth parallel of latitude, where it crosses the Missouri river. The isothermal line then turns almost due south, following very closely the one hundred and first degree of longitude until it leaves the state of Nebraska near the northeast corner of Colorado. Passing in a southwesterly direction through Colorado, it reaches, at Pueblo, almost to the one hundred and fifth degree of west longitude, whence it passes in a slightly south-easterly direction into New Mexico, turns to the west and crosses the one hundred and fifth degree of longitude at about the thirty-second degree of latitude. Then turning westward, it passes in a very irregular line through the states of California, Oregon and Washington.

Extending a distance of 100 miles on each side of this isothermal line is a belt which may be regarded as the theoretical beet sugar area of the United States. There are doubtless many localities lying outside of this belt, suggestions regarding the selection and preparation of the soil, planting, cultivation, time of harvesting, etc. These men are of course well informed on all phases of beet culture, and they are usually able to make valuable suggestions in regard to the cultivation of other crops grown in rotation with beets. Their instructions and influence therefore tend to improve the farm practice of communities in which sugar beets are grown.

The sugar beet does not require a particular kind of soil for its proper production. In general soils are described for practical purposes as clayey, sandy, loamy or alluvial soils. All of these soils will produce beets. The black prairie soils also have been found, with proper cultivation, to produce excellent beets.

New land should not be selected to grow sugar beets, for the crop is not a good reclaimer of soils. And especially to be avoided is new land containing decaying vegetable matter, which produces only rank growth with low sugar content. Preferably the most productive land on the farm should be used, such a soil as will yield a good crop of Indian corn, wheat or potatoes. The soil should neither be so compact as to interfere with cultivation to a depth of ten or twelve inches nor have a tendency to bake hard.

Happily in most American soils there is still sufficient natural fertility to produce a good crop of sugar beets, whereas in the soils of Europe, where sugar beets have been grown for years, the farmers must depend on fertilizers to insure a remunerative crop.

aside. My companion told me that she had two straight chairs and a rocker, all without seats; a chiffonier minus handles and the varnish worn off, besides, and an old white enamel bedstead with but little enamel on it.

Here was almost enough furniture for a room she wanted to furnish if she could make it look respectable. She bought three seats for the chairs at 10 cents each, ten new handles for the chiffonier and a can of varnish and can of white enamel. Aided by her husband, she resealed and varnished the chairs, mended and varnished the chiffonier and painted the bedstead. The transformation was surprising. With new curtains at the windows, the bed and chiffonier with white covers, a table from another room added on which books were placed, no one would have dreamed, she said proudly, that the pretty, fresh looking room was evolved from such hopeless looking material.

"Never despair" is a motto all housekeepers keep hidden in the depths of their being, or if some do not they should.

Cleaning Polished Wood.

Many old fashioned housewives are afraid to touch their polished wood with a wet cloth, and this is a great mistake, though, of course, woodwork should never be left damp. When cleaning the rooms the furniture may occasionally be washed with soap and water to remove dirt and grease, but it must then, of course, be carefully dried, and, last of all, it should be polished with any of the reliable furniture polishes or a well tested home variety.

Cooked Radishes.

It seems queer to think of cooking radishes, but it can be done, and people who have tasted them say they are good. Take large white radishes and cut them into thick slices. Boil for about ten minutes in water in which a little salt has been put and then fry them in hot butter, seasoning with pepper, salt and a little vinegar.

Egyptian Sashes.

Many of the new evening sashes are of the Egyptian scarf type, draped round the hips and knotted to fall with long straight ends in front.

Her Animal Nature.

When she was a baby her nurse called her a "kitten."
At the age of five her parents called her a little "monkey."
When she became a schoolgirl her playmates called her a "duck."
Her first sweetheart called her a little "deer."
When she learned to do fancy dances the men said, "She's a bear!"
Then she went upon the stage, and in the ballet she was known as a "pony."
She became a star and was the "lion" of the hour.
Men who took her to supper after the performances called her a "chicken."
About this time her female acquaintances referred to her as a "cat."
When she had grown old enough to be mean the wardrobe woman spoke of her as "that hen."—Town Topics.

Last year they had an outbreak of diphtheria amongst them near Lake. They were quarantined the death of one of their number the town supplied them with rations. But, although they were ceipt of free rations, they would remain, and so, after the burial away during the night. Now if is anything an Indiana dislikes traveling in the night, and he would only through superstition or luty necessity. These Indians rode to Fort Matachewan, but we allowed to stay there, and so we to the reservation at Turtle. Here other deaths occurred, and scattered in every direction to the woods.

Some years ago a party of us got into trouble with the Indians ing the course of their work so the men came upon an Indian. An old gun stood against a tree head of the grave, and upon that a cross had been carved. He to the same tree were a couple of plugs of tobacco rolled in birch to preserve them from the weather. As they had been out of tobacco days the men appropriated that grave, and in camp that night of their find. The Indians, of course heard of it, and going to the chief they were going to leave. On pressed for their reason they told about the tobacco being taken. The result was that the chief ordered the whites back to the grave, they replaced the tobacco. The dians were a fair sample of the tianized variety found north of Superior.

With the advance of settlement New Ontario the Indian, like moose, is slowly but surely farther back into the great northern forest. The places that knew him will know him no more forever. of the old trails are now so over with brush that they are almost iterated, and a few years more they will be completely wiped out.

SANCTUARY IN ENGLAND

The Principle Still Survives to a Limited Degree.

Much water has flowed under don bridge since the British could defy the strong arm of the by the single expedient of escaping the nearest church or hospital claiming the protection of the "sanctuary," for down to the early 18 days Great Britain had thousands just such refuges for the criminal from cathedrals and royal palaces scores of towns and cities, where man guilty of felony could laugh impunity at the officers of law justice for a period ranging from forty days. If within that time chose to go before the coroner, or in penitence and sackcloth, and confess his guilt, he was free to quit realm without any hand daring stay him.

Although no such asylum exists day for the criminal, the principle the "sanctuary" still manages to live. This privilege refers only civil offenses and not to crimes the olden days, and yet the privilege is of considerable value.

No clergyman can be arrested in the walls of his church or while is going to or returning from his Bishops and archbishops are still protected, for not one of them could be haled before a magistrate even though the cause is a crime, unless the especially commands it. Nor even to the present time has any way an effect within the precincts of the king's palaces.—Chicago

THE ONTARIO INDIAN.

the Most Superstitious Creature in North America.

There are no people on the continent as superstitious as the Indians, W. W. Fox in The Toronto Globe. Indians do not talk about their sins to whites, and it is only when a white man has done them a kindness or has been so associated with them that they look upon him as a friend that their stoicism thaws. Then they realize that beneath the red skin is just as much real humanity as, just as much love for a joke romp as there is with the "Shylock" (white man).

There is an illustration of their superstition: One whom I well knew, and of the most intelligent, for both wife and he were educated at the Factory, bought a magazine. I asked him if he had used it. "No," he said. "I first shoot a rabbit with it, then I have good luck long." Next day he did kill a rabbit, and after that did not hesitate to shoot rabbits, hares and partridges. He believed he would always have good luck.

Another superstition prevalent among these Indians is that it is lucky to live in a teepee or house where one of their number has died. They know them to fire a shack in such circumstances, and it is usual thing for them to burn a house even in the depth of winter when death has invaded it.

Last year they had an outbreak of cholera amongst them near Elk Lake. They were quarantined after the death of one of their number, and were supplied them with provisions.

But, although they were in need of free ration, they would not accept of one, after the burial, stole during the night. Now if there is anything an Indian dislikes it is being in the night, and he will do

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Bathing In the Surf Is Popular With Little People.

A YOUNGSTER'S FIRST DIP.

The Initial Plunge In Old Ocean Not Always a Joyous Occasion—Things of Interest to Boys and Girls—Some Good Games.

Bathing now is the popular diversion of all both great and small. In ocean, lake and river, when skies are bright and Old Sol is turning on the heat with scorching intensity, every one who can do so takes to the water. Children es-

BATHING UNDER PROTEST.

Children especially delight in playing on the shore, wading in the brooks and dipping in the surf.

Little folks, however, must be careful when playing in or near the water and should never do so unattended by some one old enough to exercise careful supervision. The ocean surf is decidedly unsafe for little folks. When a roller comes in it will overthrow the strongest, and sometimes strong swimmers are overwhelmed and drowned. The small boy in the picture is in no danger, but he plainly shows a dislike for bathing. After a few dips he will get over his fear, and then he will need to be restrained. The picture was taken at Coney Island and is one that can be duplicated any day during the summer.

Here we go round the mulberry bush, the mulberry bush, the mulberry bush;
Here we go round the mulberry bush

HINTS TO THE PACKER.

Much Tissue Paper Simplifies the Work Immensely.

Trunk packing is an art which few women and fewer men master. Perhaps the most important reason why it is a perennially difficult task for a woman is that clothes are constantly changing in shape and style. By the time a woman had learned to fold a plaited skirt scant skirts were in style, and by the time she had learned to pack those without wrinkles panners and masses of drapery presented a different problem.

Much tissue paper simplifies the problem of packing tenfold. Old paper is just as useful as new for this purpose, so all the tissue paper that comes wrapped about hats, frocks or shoes should be saved against packing day. Make long twisted rolls of it to put in the folds of waists and skirts, stuff loose little wads of it in bodices and sleeves and cover easily soiled clothes generously with it to protect them from contact with other clothes or the side of the trunk.

Shoe cases of some kind are a necessity to the packer, but they can be formed of folds of tissue paper if nothing more substantial is at hand. Canton flannel squares bound with tape and with a long strip of tape fastened in the middle of the square prove very convenient for shoe covers. The shoes are wrapped in the squares and tied securely with the tape. Shoe bags, too, are useful, a canton flannel or linen bag for each shoe.

Many wrinkles disappear after a few hours hanging. Voile and almost all woollen materials lose their wrinkles if they are hung on hangers as soon as they are unpacked.

SUMMER LINGERIE.

Net Petticoats Are the Latest Novelties in Underwear.

It is well in these days of shifting fashion not to buy too many of any one garment at one time. It is always easy to replenish the wardrobe, and then one is sure of the latest model, for underwear cannot be made over, and to find oneself with a half dozen of anything quite new and yet quite out of date is distressing.

Among the more recent novelties are the all net, unlined, shaped petticoats with underbodices matching. Some clever person has devised shoulder straps contrived from strings of pearls or of brilliants. The most striking novelty in tinting is found in the daffodil

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take 'Fruit-a-tives'"

LAKELET, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911

"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the diseases I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives', completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take 'Fruit-a-tives' if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking 'Fruit-a-tives', I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as 'Nerves' or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for which the Doctors said 'I would have to take medicine all my life', but 'Fruit-a-tives' banished all these troubles and now I am a well woman!"

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt has been elected a director of the Yorkville Progressive club of New York.

Mrs. William Gerry Slade has been re-elected president of the Society of Daughters of the War of 1812.

Mrs. Sarah A. Faulkner of Brockton, Mass., spends hundreds of dollars every year buying and mailing post cards to people everywhere.

Wannetta Haverstick, aged five, of St. Louis is said to know as much geography, physics and politics as the average high school student.

Miss Duncan, chairman of the West Ham Board of guardians, has been appointed justice of the peace. This is the first time a woman has held such a position in England.

By the recent retirement of Mrs. Joynton, who for twenty years had lived in the Hale lighthouse, on the Mersey, England loses its only woman lighthouse keeper. Mrs. Joynton, who is known locally as "the heroine of the Mersey," took up her duties on the death of her husband, the former keeper.

Town Topics.

Ever since we can remember anything about Cleveland it has just been going to have a new union station.—Ohio State Journal.

Though not a best seller, it's fiction all right—the signs on cars, "No Standing on the Platform" and "No Spitting on Floors."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

It is now some days since a small boy arrived in New York and mistook it for Boston, but nothing has been done. Though his youth is some excuse, we must avoid maudlin sentimentality. This is actionable.—New year they had an outbreak of typhoid amongst them near Elk. They were quarantined after death of one of their number, and then supplied them with provisions. But, although they were in need of free rations, they would not accept of one of their number, and so, after the burial, stole during the night. Now if there is anything an Indiana dislikes it is lying in the night, and he will do anything through superstition or absolute necessity. These Indians returned to Fort Matachewan, but were not allowed to stay there, and so went on to a reservation at Turtle Lake. Other deaths occurred, and they fled in every direction through the woods.

Two years ago a party of surveyors went to trouble with the Indians. During the course of their work some of them came upon an Indian grave. A gun stood against a tree at the head of the grave, and upon the tree was had been carved. Hanging from the same tree were a couple of pieces of tobacco rolled in birch bark, to preserve them from the weather. They had been out of tobacco for the men appropriated that at the time, and in camp that night told the chief to find. The Indians, of course, did not find it, and going to the chief said they were going to leave. On being asked for their reason they told him that the tobacco being taken away. The result was that the chief ordered the whites back to the grave, where they replaced the tobacco. These Indians were a fair sample of the Christianized variety found north of Lake Superior.

With the advance of settlement in Ontario the Indian, like the white man, is slowly but surely stealing back into the great northern wilderness. The places that knew him once know him no more forever. Many old trails are now so overgrown with brush that they are almost obliterated, and a few years more and they will be completely wiped out.

ANCTUARY IN ENGLAND.

Principle Still Survives to a Limited Degree.

Water has flowed under London since the British criminal defied the strong arm of the law by a single expedient of escaping to the nearest church or hospital and begging the protection of the "sanctuary" for down to the early Stuart period. Great Britain had thousands of such refuges for the criminal, the cathedral and royal palaces to the towns and cities, where the guilty of felony could laugh with impunity at the officers of law and escape for a period ranging up to three days. If within that time he did not go before the coroner, clothed in white and sackcloth, and confess his guilt, he was free to quit the country without any hand darning to him.

Though no such asylum exists today for the criminal, the principle of "sanctuary" still manages to survive. This privilege refers only to offenses and not to crimes as in former days, and yet the privileges are considerable value.

A clergyman can be arrested without walls of his church or while he is on his way to or returning from his duty. Bishops and archbishops are still more privileged, for not one of them can be arrested before a magistrate even though he is a criminal, unless the king commands it. Nor even up to the present time has any warrant been issued within the precincts of any of the king's palaces.—Chicago Tribune.

The Mulberry Bush.

Joining hands and forming a ring, the players dance round, singing:

Here we go round the mulberry bush, the mulberry bush, the mulberry bush;
Here we go round the mulberry bush
On a fine and frosty morning.

Then letting go of hands, they sing:

This is the way we wash our clothes, wash our clothes, wash our clothes;
This is the way we wash our clothes
On a fine and frosty morning.

As they sing they imitate the action of the hands in washing. The chorus and dance round is repeated after each verse. The other verses are:

- (2) This is the way we iron our clothes.
- (3) This is the way we wash our face.
- (4) This is the way we comb our hair.
- (5) This is the way we go to school.
- (6) This is the way we learn to read.
- (7) This is the way we learn to sew.
- (8) This is the way we come from school.

The actions of ironing, washing, combing, walking, reading and sewing must accompany each verse in the right order.

A Little Sympathy.

The artist Peter of Cortona was engaged on a picture for the royal palace of Petti, and Ferdinand II. greatly admired his representation of a weeping child.

"Has your majesty," said the painter, "a mind to see how easy it is to make this child of mine laugh?"

His majesty shook his head in the affirmative; then the artist merely touched the corners of the lips and the inner extremities of the eyebrows, when the little urchin on the canvas seemed in danger of bursting his sides with laughter where the moment before he seemed breaking his heart with weeping.

"You accomplished that with a touch!" cried the king.

"You can do the same with your subjects," retorted the artist. "With a little sympathy you can do as I did with my brush."

Helen's Descent.

"Helen," said a certain mother to her little girl, who had noisily entered the room where she was entertaining callers, "I am surprised at you. You came downstairs so heavily that you could be heard all over the house. Now, go back and come down again like a little lady."

After the lapse of a few silent moments Helen reappeared.

"Did you hear me come downstairs that time, mother?"

"No, dear; you did beautifully. Now, in the future always come downstairs that way. Tell the ladies how you managed to come down so quietly."

"Oh," was the nonchalant though respectful answer, "the last time I slid down the banister rail."

Seeking Indian Bones.

Relics of the tribes of red men who inhabited Canada before the white men came to conquer are being sought for in a busy part of Toronto by Dr. R. B. Orr, head of the Provincial Museum.

Three of these aboriginal cemeteries have been discovered in Vaughan township, where several very interesting and valuable mementoes of early days were unearthed. The bodies of the dead were carried to places of exposure, sometimes in trees, until the flesh, enclosed in coverings like fur, became dust.

APRON FOR THE BRAND NEW HOUSEWIFE.

yellow lingerie. This is generally of chiffon rather than of crepe de chine, and in combination with it is used French valenciennes lace, pure white in color. Even nightgowns may be had of it. Some nightgowns made of the batiste or the nainsook have satin rosettes and bands of this color, and as many as twelve knots with lines of it connecting give a decidedly sunny, not to say jaunty, touch to its general appearance, particularly when one has been used to pink and blue or, at the extreme, the softest maize tone. Nothing like a little apron to add the last touch of perfection to the costume of the busy mistress of the new home, and the illustration shows a dainty model that might come under the head of "lingerie." This delightful apron is of lace and lawn, with bowknots of blue ribbon strings, which run through a lawn casing.

Sugar Taffy For the Children.

Take two pounds of granulated sugar, one-half cupful of vinegar, one cupful of water, small piece of butter. Put these on to cook without stirring until this mixture, when tried in cold water, becomes hard.

Remove from the stove and place in a greased pan and add whatever kind of flavoring you wish. When cool enough to handle, pull.

You can make as much as forty-four sticks of taffy, which you can sell for a cent apiece. The sugar costs 11 cents, and the rest of the ingredients cost practically nothing, so the gain amounts to a nice sum.

For the Dishwasher.

Besides having a pot chain and scraper it is a good thing to have thick canvas cloths for the pots and pans and separate light cloths for the finer china-ware. Cake tins, patty-pans and all small tinware bottled in a dispan in the water of which a handful of soda has been thrown will become fresh and clean and as bright as new.

Von.

In Germany "von" implies nobility, and all persons who belong to the nobility prefix "von" to their names without any exception. Persons who do not belong to the nobility cannot have the right to put "von" before their names. A man who is knighted for some reason, however, has the same right to put "von" before his family names as a person of ancient nobility. For instance, when Alexander Humboldt was knighted he became Alexander von Humboldt. All his descendants, male and female, take the prefix.

Automobile Runs.

British makers are trying to develop cheaper automobiles.

A sand box for automobiles like the familiar device on locomotives to distribute sand under their tires to prevent skidding has been patented by a Massachusetts inventor.

Following the example of other foreign cities, Paris has seen the light and henceforth the use of muffler cut-outs on automobiles in that city will bring swift retribution in the form of the law. Their use has been made a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment.

Our Big Canal.

Life will be just one blamed lonesome after another down at Cape Horn when the Panama canal is finally opened.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Every time there's a slide in the Culebra cut the bones of De Lesseps must rattle. Panama is trying hard to retain its title of "grave of reputations."—New York Telegram.

The "slide" is getting to be a sort of habit in our big canal. Still we are willing to bank on Colonel Goethals' assurance that the big ditch will be completed on time.—Exchange.

There were nineteen commercial fuel briquetting plants in operation in the United States last year.

India has produced about 2,500,000 tons of sugar annually for the last two years, or more than any other country in the world.

DEATHS.

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum.
Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business.
We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire.
They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling.
What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspec-

The funeral of the late Dr. Allen B.
Carscallen took place from his home and was very largely attended. The deceased was a prominent member of the Masonic order. He graduated at 1875, and had been practicing at Enterprise for twenty-seven years. His son graduated in science at Queen's two years ago.

Bee Keepers.

The Ontario Bee-keeper's Association have sent out their Honey Crop Report. The average crop is 63 lbs. per colony. The Eastern Counties of Ontario have practically no honey at all, and the same is true of New Ontario, and the greater part of Quebec.
South western Ontario has a better crop. The short honey crop means high prices. At a meeting of the crop Committee the following prices were set for honey.

No. 1, Light extracted (wholesale)
11c-12c per lb. (Retail) 14c-15c per lb

The honey crop in Lennox and better than in any neighboring county.

The Lennox and Addington Branch of the Ontario Bee-keepers are preparextra good honey are invited to bring in samples. The honey will be shipped
